LLOYD GEORGE, EX-PREMIER OF BRITAIN, DIES

Member of Big 4 in 1st World War.

BY E. R. NODERER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 26.—David Lloyd George, Britain's World War I. prime minister, died in his sleep today at his Carnarvonshire home, Ty Newydd, Llanystumdwy, Wales, near Criccieth, after a five weeks' illness. He was 82.

The statesman, who started life as a country lawyer and achieved the reputation in Britain as "the man who won the last war," suffered no organic disease, but had been gradually losing physical strength since suffering an attack of influenza. The end came at 8:35 tonight.

Lloyd George's second wife, the former Miss Frances Stevenson, whom he married Oct. 23, 1943, was at his bedside when he died. She had been his secretary for 30 years and was the "glamor girl" of the Versailles peace conference. She was 25 years his junior.

First Wife Died in 1941.

His first wife, Dame Margaret Lloyd George, whom he married in 1888, died in 1941.

Lloyd George accepted an earldom last New Year's day and adopted the title Earl Lloyd George of Dwyfor, but never took his seat in the house of lords.

Son Succeeds to Earldom.

Both sons had served in the last World war, emerging as majors. Richard succeeds to the earldom and Richard's son, Owen, 20, becomes Viscount Gwynedd.

Lloyd George's death leaves Vittorio Orlando of Italy as the only survivor of the Big Four of President Wilson, Georges Clemenceau of France, Lloyd George and Orlando at the Versailles conference at which the peace treaty was written after Germany's defeat in 1918.

Lloyd George was expected to be buried in the family vault in a Criccieth graveyard where lie his first wife, and a daughter, Mair Eluned, who died at 17.

M. P. 54 YEARS.

Lloyd George had held a seat in the house of commons from Carnarvon for 54 years, alternately cheered and jeered by Britons as his unshakable beliefs found him their champion or their whipping boy.

Canada Bans Food for U. S., Senators Told

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—Reports of ample meat supplies in Canada at a time when American housewives find it increasingly difficult to find meat for their tables aroused senatorial curiosity today as the senate agriculture committee opened an investigation of food shortages and black markets in the United States.

"Canada is reported to have all kinds of meat and is looking for a market," Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.] told the committee. "In this country there are more cattle on the ranges than ever before, but our people are not getting enough meat. There's something rotten in Denmark."

Lt. Col. Ralph W. Olmstead, director of supply for the Commodity Credit corporation and war food administration, told the committee the WFA had tried unsuccessfully to import meat from Canada, but that the Canadian government had placed an embargo on meat exports to this country.

Canada on Cash Basis.

"Why can't Canada send meat to England?" asked Sen. Ellender [D., La.]. "Then we wouldn't have to deplete our resources by lend-leasing meat to that country."

"The British have to pay for it when they get it from Canada," said Sen. Shipstead [R., Minn.].

After the hearing Col. Olmstead said in an interview that the Canadian embargo on meat shipments to the United States was placed because Canada has pledged its surplus meat to England. He would not comment on Wheeler's statement that Canada has excess supplies.

[Roosevelt asks congress to approve world food organization. OPA studies army accusations that packers fail to supply meat set aside for military use. Stories on page 10. Roosevelt asks additional power to reduce tariff rates. Story on page 23.]

A procession of witnesses representing the National Independent Meat Packers association appeared before the committee today to criticize OPA restrictions. All warned that small packers may be forced out of business unless relief is given by the OPA or congress.

OPA Official Silent.

Despite the attacks on the OPA by the witnesses and caustic comments by senators during their testimony, James F. Brownlee, OPA deputy administrator, declined an invitation from Chairman Thomas [D., Okla.] to answer charges made before the committee.

Wells E. Hunt, assistant to the president of the William Schluderberg-T. J. Kurdle company, Baltimore, Md., meat packers, told the committee there are three basic causes of the meat shortage. They are, he said:

1. OPA price policies, as applied to the live stock and meat industry, which "persistently adhere" to the over-all profit theory, basing prices on the profits of all lines manufactured by a packer. This is a disadvantage to the small packer who does not market such by-products as soap, canned meats, and fertilizer, he said.

2. Failure of government agencies to control indiscriminate, unlicensed cattle slaughter.

3. The administration's policy of dividing the responsibility for live stock production between different agencies.

Wilbur La Roe Jr., attorney for the independent packers, told the committee that the country now has its most extensive black market in meat, due, he said, to OPA regulations that force legitimate packers to produce both pork and beef at a loss.

Canada Studies the Situation.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 26 [Special].—The Canadian government is giving careful attention to all aspects of the world meat shortage, it was said today in reply to a question asked by a member of parliament.

While Canada is shipping all the pork products, beef, and other foods for which storage and shipping space can be found, there is still a surplus. If rationing is again introduced, it is said, it will be in order to conserve supplies to satisfy opinion in countries where meat is rationed.

HIS BELT FORGOTTEN, WINDOW WASHER DIES IN ALCOHOL BLAST

New York, March 26 [Special].—Daniel Doherty, a window cleaner who didn't bother to use a safety belt, fell seven floors to his death today when the explosion of a 25 gallon alcohol still blew him off a two foot window ledge in the loft of the Dominion Food Products, Inc., a sirup manufacturing firm.

Police said Doherty's safety belt, which they found in the loft, probably was strong enough to have withstood the blast. But he also would have escaped had he been washing either of the other two windows in the loft at the time, for the freak blast shattered only the glass in the one on which he was working.

Two employes of the company were working in the loft. One of the men noticed an excess amount of compressed air pressure on the still and tried to turn a valve to release it. Unable to do so, he and his companion fled a moment before the explosion.

U. S. AND BRITAIN GIVE WARSHIPS TO RUSSIAN NAVY

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, March 26.—The British battleship Royal Sovereign and the American cruiser Milwaukee are now operating in the Red fleet under the respective names of Archangelsk and Murmansk.

The former British warship, now the Archangelsk, is the largest capital ship in the soviet navy. It is a vessel of 29,150 tons with a speed of 22 knots and mounts 56 guns, eight of which are 14 inch—larger than any other guns on Red warships.

The cruiser Murmansk, formerly the Milwaukee, is the fastest cruiser in the Red fleet today. Displacing 7,050 tons, it has a speed of 35 knots. As remodeled by soviet naval designers the Murmansk carries 66 guns, including 12 6 inch guns. Several other British and American war vessels have been turned over to the soviet union and renamed.

98 Per Cent of Chutists Dropped Successfully

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 26.—Ninety-eight per cent of all parachutists were dropped successfully across the Rhine on March 24 and approximately the same percentage of all gliders were released at their assigned landing zones, Maj. Gen. Paul L. Williams, commander of United States troop carrier forces, announced today.

Cruiser Chicago Meets Tests in First Shakedown Cruise

BY FRANK CIPRIANI.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AT SEA ABOARD THE NEW U. S. CRUISER CHICAGO [Delayed].—Just two years ago Chicago was engaged in a special bond drive to raise $47,000,000 for the construction of a new cruiser to replace the fighting Chicago which went down after a two day battle with Japanese torpedo planes Jan. 29-30, 1943, off Guadalcanal. In less than 60 days Chicago raised $54,000,000, overshooting the mark by $7,000,000, as its answer to Japan.

Capt. R. R. Hartung.

Today that answer—the new cruiser Chicago—is sailing the seas, big, mighty and vengeful.

Meets All Requirements.

The present voyage is a shakedown, or major trial run in which the giant ship is being tested, from stem to stern and keel to topmast, for behavior. Any kinks in performance will be detected and corrected. Thus far, however, the Chicago appears to have met all requirements.

The shakedown also permits a better welding, under war time conditions, of the ship's personnel. Every man, from the skipper, Capt. Richard R. Hartung, a native of Des Moines, Ia., to the newest landfresh boot, gets to know something more about his ship.

The cruiser Chicago is in extremely competent hands. More than 60 per cent of her officers and men are battle seasoned. Capt. Hartung himself has commanded mine and service squadrons in the North Atlantic when the going there was difficult. His executive officer, Comdr. W. R. D. Nickelson, a native of Van Buren, Ark., is a veteran of the fiercest Pacific fighting. And so on down the line. They know the sea, they know the war, they know the Japs, and they have a score to settle.

Take Battle Practice.

War time routine aboard the new Chicago is mandatory. A 24 hour watch is maintained. One gets a glimpse of the deep rooted efficiency of the navy when general quarters, or battle stations, are sounded. Then occurs an orderly, quiet rush to guns, lookout posts, and other strategic spots. In mere seconds, it seems, every man is at his station. And no murmurs of discontent are heard.

The Chicago rides well, tho with an obvious roll. On a recent voyage, perhaps half the ship's company was seasick, and the ship's weekly paper, aptly called The Big Shot, recorded the event in cartoon and story for posterity, the cartoon showing a mass rush of men for the rails.

A survey of the men shows a real pride among them at being members of the new Chicago's company.

Spiritual welfare is in the hands of Chaplain F. G. Doerschug of New York state, a veteran of the Pacific war. Books, music, and recreational facilities are available.

Chicago's generosity is in evidence thruout the ship. There are two pianos, a 10,000 volume library, athletic equipment, two ship's bells, and other appropriate items which came from Chicago organizations and individuals. Included also is a $5,800 welfare fund donated in pennies by Chicago's school children.

Captain Is Grateful.

"Chicago has been most generous in providing these various things that contribute so much to morale and welfare," said Capt. Hartung. "It has far exceeded any expectations. It shows the tremendous enthusiasm Chicago has for this ship. Many ships, after commissioning, lose contact with the cities after which they are named, and my hope is that the city of Chicago and the cruiser Chicago will continue their mutual interest. We on the Chicago feel greatly indebted to Mayor and Mrs. Kelly and the others who have so well remembered our ship."

The new Chicago was launched at the Philadelphia navy yard Aug. 20, 1944, with Mrs. Kelly as sponsor. She was commissioned Jan. 10, this year. The new Chicago is of the 13,000 ton class, considerably larger than her 10,000 ton predecessor, and more powerful. She carries main batteries of nine 8-inch guns, secondary batteries of 12 5-inch guns, and an impressive number of 20 mm. and 40 mm. anti-aircraft guns.

BIG B-29 FLEET BOMBS KYUSHU, JAP HOME ISLE

GUAM, March 27 [Tuesday]—(AP).—A "very large" force of Marianas based B-29s, presumably more than 200, battered the southern Japanese island of Kyushu today, attacking air fields and bases all the way to the coast fronting on the East China sea.

The targets attacked included a big aircraft plant at Omura on the west side of Kyushu. This area once was hit by Super Fortresses from the China theater Thus, for the first time, the 21st bomber command hit a target which the 20th bomber command had attacked from another direction.

Headquarters of the 21st specified the raid was not the low level type recently made against Honshu cities.

Two Air Fields Bombed.

Among Kyushu's air fields hit were those at Oita, which guards the south entrance to the inland sea of Japan, and Tachiarai.

The Kyushu attack swung American air power back against an island which was hard hit March 18 and 19 by carrier planes of task force 58. The navy disclosed today that Vice Adm. Mitscher's group is bombarding and raiding the Ryukyus at points 300 miles southwest of Kyushu.

Okinawa, naval and air base in the Ryukyus, was shelled by battleships, including some of the 45,000 ton class, and bombed by carrier planes.

[Tokyo radio said three allied cruisers bombarded Pratas, an island 260 miles southwest of Formosa, Monday. Pratas is midway between the north tip of Luzon Island and Hong Kong.]

U. S. Warship Damaged.

Okinawa's airfields and other installations were the targets. Enemy planes attacked the American fleet group and one of the "light units"—a term often employed for a destroyer or destroyer escort—was damaged. Six enemy planes were shot down.

Acknowledging the shelling of Okinawa, Tokyo radio claimed, without American confirmation, in a Tuesday broadcast that Japanese planes sank two cruisers and two destroyers of the attacking force and heavily damaged a third destroyer.

Dispatches based on previous headquarters announcements that the Ryukyus were raided and bombarded Friday and Saturday specified only Okino Daito as the target of the battleships.

Sunday Report Blank.

Today's bulletin left a gap for Sunday, the day Tokyo radio said landings were attempted on two islands near Okinawa. A later enemy broadcast said that up to Monday night there had been no landings.

Tokyo radio reports said Japanese defenders had "prevented the landing of so much as one American soldier" up to 8:40 p. m. Monday [5:40 a. m. Monday, Chicago time]. Tokyo said heavy United States naval and air attacks were continuing.

Tokyo reports, all unconfirmed, said the attempted landings were on Tokashiki and Aka Islands west of the southwestern tip of Okinawa.

"The enemy landing attempt was made," the Domei agency said, "after continuous aerial bombing attacks and navy bombardments by the enemy task force since the morning of March 24."

Fringed with Reefs.

Capture of Okinawa would give the United States control of the East China sea and would provide air fields to strike at the Japanese homeland.

The first Japanese air operation against Iwo since United States marines concluded their conquest of that island in the Volcano group, 750 miles south of Tokyo, also was disclosed. Army "Black Widow" night fighters intercepted the raiding force Sunday night and "a number of enemy bombers were destroyed."

Yanks Land on Philippine Isle of Cebu—Japs

MANILA, March 27 [Tuesday]—(AP).—American invasion of Cebu, one of the two main Philippine Islands still in Japanese hands, was reported by Tokyo radio today, but headquarters here offered no confirmation.

The enemy broadcast said the Yanks began landings at 7 a. m. Monday, under cover of naval shelling by a task force composed of six cruisers and destroyers.

Tokyo radio gave the landing place as at Talisay, a fair sized town five miles south of Cebu City.

Cebu, 130 miles long and 20 miles across its widest part, is between enemy held Negros and American occupied Leyte Islands. It is a prime sugar producing island, with Cebu City, midway along its eastern coast, the most populated area.

Heavy bombers have been hitting the Cebu City vicinity for days. A strong force of 13th air force Liberators dropped 250 tons of explosives on targets there Saturday in the heaviest raid of the war.

Jap Casualties 297,024.

This assault was reported today by Gen. MacArthur, who also reported a strong raid on Legaspi, on southeastern Luzon, in a bulletin showing total Japanese casualties in the Philippines at 297,024.

Legaspi's coastal defenses and communications were raked with 200 tons of bombs.

MacArthur reported an additional 14,853 Japanese dead had been counted and 171 prisoners taken in the Philippines since March 16, when he reported enemy casualties approximating 282,000.

General advances on all Philippine ground fronts were reported.

Heavy bombers hit Formosa with 67 tons of bombs concentrated in the industrial area of Takao on the southwest coast. There was no interception.

Tell Massacre of Town.

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN SOUTHERN LUZON, March 26 (AP).—Surviving Filipinos of the town of Bauan said today Japanese massacred many civilians of the town on Batangas bay on Feb. 28.

The townspeople were summoned to church and divided, the account said. Women and children were taken to the school building and men and boys were herded into a large residence. The doors were locked.

Then, while Japanese gunners stood guard, violent explosions destroyed the residence. Most of those trapped inside were killed. Some, maimed, dragged themselves from the ruins only to be shot or bayoneted. A few, including Father Garcia, escaped.

The women and children fled from the school as the Japanese sprinkled gasoline around many houses and set them afire. A number of invalids perished in the flames.

YANKS MOP UP LIMBURG; NAZI FRONT BROKEN

PARIS, March 27 (Tuesday)—(AP).—Lt. Gen. Patch's American 7th army hurdled the Rhine early yesterday, joining six other allied armies east of the Rhine in the drive on Berlin. The Germans reeled back from a series of break-thrus, in one of which Lt. Gen. Hodge's United States 1st army drove 35 miles.

Seventh army veterans struck without artillery or air preparation in a surprise assault at an undisclosed point. A front dispatch said the 7th's operation was going according to plan several hours after Patch's troops had crossed the Rhine.

Smash Into Limburg.

The Germans said the Americans were hammering at the gates of the big traffic center of Karlsruhe.

Bulletins from the 1st army front said powerful tank forces had penetrated to the highway town of Heckholzhausen in one 35 mile thrust out of the Remagen-Erpel bridgehead and to Hackenburg, 8 miles east of Altenkirchen and 33 miles east of the Rhine in another. Other armored units smashed into the city of Limburg in a 22 mile thrust. Heckholzhausen is eight miles northeast of Limburg. Limburg, 225 miles southwest of Berlin, was being cleared swiftly.

Black-Out of 3d Army.

Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army break-thru forces of the 4th armored division were ripping into the middle of Germany under a security blackout, probably well beyond positions reported yesterday when they were 40 miles east of the Rhine.

(A New York Times dispatch from London said "reconnaissance tanks of rampaging allied spearheads were reported by the German radio to be driving on Fulda, nearly 100 miles beyond the Rhine and thus slashing across the southern exits of the Ruhr." Fulda is 50 miles northeast of Frankfurt and 200 from Berlin.)

Third army mop-up forces were battling in Frankfurt-on-Main, 32 miles from the 1st army tanks in Limburg. The radio at Frankfurt, Germany's ninth largest city with a peace time population of 546,000, was heard calling Nazi leaders to report to field commanders "to help round up split German troops."

9th Batters at Duisburg.

Lt. Gen. Simpson's United States 9th army drove 17 miles beyond the Rhine against bewildered resistance, fought into the northern suburbs of the Ruhr inland port of Duisburg.

and was by-passing Essen, biggest arsenal city in the Ruhr.

The British 2d army had spilled out 15 miles onto the north German plain and was driving east of Wesel. A high officer of the 1st allied air borne army said "there is nothing to halt a break-thru" in the north.

[The British radio said the American-British bridgehead had been doubled in size in 24 hours, and another BBC report said the 9th army was only about three miles from Essen.]

A 1st army field dispatch said Hodges' break-thru was scored by the most powerful tank force ever marshalled on the western front. The twin drives of the 1st and 3d armies were threatening to split all German armies in the west.

The 1st army's breakthru column was headed eastward with such speed that tanks rumbled on past towns where German troops were garrisoned.

This unidentified "mystery column" had broken thru the crust of German resistance. The enemy to the north was in rwift retreat to avoid being ground to bits between the 1st and 9th armies.

Bulldozers Clear a Path.

The only things slowing the thrust were debris and demolished bridges. Engineers were in the vanguard, clearing a path with bulldozers.

In the northeastward withdrawal, the Germans gave up the strategic road center of Altenkirchen, 20 miles east of the Rhine and 255 miles southwest of Berlin. The Americans then pressed on east of that city. Other forces reached Herpleroth, two and a half miles to the southeast of Altenkirchen.

Drives on the north and south of the bridgehead had chopped up the enemy crust into isolated pockets. The principal resistance was offered by disorganized German infantry braced by self-propelled guns and artillery.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead said the push was much like the Normandy break-thru, and Correspondent Hal Boyle said "Hodges' men are back in the running with Patton's charging 3d army Shermans in the great allied Berlin derby."

Beat Back Counter-Attacks.

On the north flank the United States 1st infantry division, beating back two successive days of strong German counter-attacks, drove forward more than two miles into Eltorf, on the Sieg river 14 miles east of the Rhine.

The Germans were disengaging armor and infantry lest they be overrun. The 1st army took 3,147 prisoners on Sunday.

Patton's 3d army probably was accepting this 1st army challenge in the race eastward, but the 3d's front running 4th armored division, which hurdled the River Main on Sunday, was under a news blackout.

Behind it, other armored columns moved into the ruined streets of Frankfurt, birthplace of Goethe. The bridgehead now was 30 miles wide and more than 30 miles deep.

The 3d army dashed on 10 miles east of Frankfurt to the River Main opposite Hanau and 13 miles northwest of where tanks seized the bridge at Aschaffenburg on Sunday. Aschaffenburg is 22 miles southeast of Frankfurt.

No Time to Destroy Bridge.

Other 3d army troops crossed the Rhine somewhere south of Coblenz. This made the third crossing for Patton in that area.

[A German radio station said allied tanks were approaching the Neckar valley, which runs thru Heidelberg and into the Rhine at Mannheim. It also said that allied tanks were one mile west of Bad Nauheim, 15 miles north of Frankfurt. American spearheads have entered Wiesbaden, the Luxemburg radio said.]

The 4th armored division, which seized the Aschaffenburg bridge, last was reported 40 miles beyond the Rhine and 136 miles deep into Germany. It drove across the bridge at such speed that the Germans, who might have stemmed the 3d army rush along this broad stream, had no time to destroy the span.

The Germans said Patton was sending parachute troops down in front of his onrushing columns to speed the advance.

Six Miles from Juncture.

Northward, where earlier crossings of the Rhine had been made six miles south of Coblenz, the 87th division struck harder resistance but last was reported about six miles from a junction with the 1st army pressing south along the river's east bank.

It had now pushed three and a half miles east of the Rhine beyond Boppard, which is seven miles south of Coblenz.

Behind Patton's armor, infantry cleared Hassloch, seven miles east of Mainz, overran several towns between the fallen city of Darmstadt and Frankfurt, and pushed on into Frankfurt's outskirts.

The 26th infantry division was disclosed to be operating in the 3d army's original Rhine bridgehead along with the 5th and 90th infantry divisions, the 4th armored infantry, and 4th armored divisions.

The 3d army took 5,214 prisoners on Sunday.

Panzer Division Fights 9th.

The Germans threw the 116th panzer [armored] division into the path of Simpson's 9th army as it drove thru the forests of the Ruhr.

A tank battle raged five miles southeast of Dorsten, which is 17 miles beyond the Rhine east of Wesel.

The 30th infantry division was battling nine miles north of Essen after a four mile advance up to late afternoon. Other 9th army forces crossed the Lippe river to protect the 30th's northern flank.

Forces fighting along the Lippe were 12 miles east of the Rhine and were engaged in another tank battle south of Gahlen.

The 79th infantry division to the south likewise ran into tank opposition and found the going slower, but it was fighting in Wehoven, northeast suburb of Duisburg, the Ruhr inland port with a population of 31,000.

The 79th captured Heisfeld and pressed two and a half miles eastward, where it was nine miles northwest of Essen.

Scots Gain Ground.

The super-highway to Berlin had been cut in at least three places as the British, Americans, and Canadians struck out thru northern Germany from a solid bridgehead, now more than 31 miles long.

Fighting Scots gave the British 2d army a bridgehead 15 miles deep at an undisclosed point.

Since the 9th army had been making the greatest speed eastward, the Germans brought the crack 116th, which had been beaten by the 30th twice before at Aachen and in the Ardennes, down to the American front.

Then Field Marshal Montgomery's British forces struck.

The United States air borne forces north of Wesel, in concert with the 6th British air borne, crashed thru broken and disorganized enemy forces for huge gains against opposition so light it was almost nonexistent.

British Under Blackout.

Sweeping out of their positions along the Issel river, British parachute troops drove within a half mile of Bruenen, which is three miles beyond the Issel.

The American air borne forces made similar sweeping advances eastward, and by last accounts both forces still were advancing.

Only on the northwest was resistance still fierce and Gen. Dempsey's British 2d army headquarters predicted it would weaken there too in view of the German retreat east of Wesel.

The Canadians on the western end of the bridgehead were making slow but steady progress.

They captured Millingen, four miles north of Rees, where the Germans had tried to anchor their lines on the northwest, and likewise took Bienen, four miles northwest of Rees, then advanced one-fourth of a mile beyond.

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

Monday's official German report of fighting on the western front said:

"In the great battle of the lower Rhine, our troops stubbornly defended the depth of our main battle field and simultaneously continued their attacks against air borne landed British and American troops which were reënforced yesterday [Sunday].

"Troops of our army destroyed 60 gliders. Flak artillery shot down 149 allied planes, including 75 fully laden gliders.

"On the lower Lippe and near Dinslaken the enemy, after bitter fighting, succeeded in forcing breaches in major depth stretching as far as the eastern fringe of the Huenxer forest.

"The battle is also raging from the lower Sieg to as far as the Rhine bend north of Coblenz with undiminished ferocity. The Americans pressed back our positions in frontal assault southeast of Hennef. East of the Wied and north of Bendorf they advanced several kilometers.

"From the Oppenheim bridgehead American tank forces broke thru to the east and have reached the Main near Hanau and Aschaffenburg. Therefore, violent mobile fighting is raging between the northern slopes of the Odenwald and the lower Rhine.

"Between Worms and Ludwigshafen the enemy has crossed the Rhine. His crossing attempts near Speyer failed. On the front south of this area our troops fought their way back to the eastern bank of the river."

BRITISH KING PRAISES IKE AND MONTGOMERY FOR RHINE CROSSING

LONDON, March 26 [Reuters].—King George of England has sent telegrams to Gen. Eisenhower, supreme commander, and Field Marshal Montgomery, commanding the 21st army group, congratulating them on their "triumphant passage of the Rhine."

To Eisenhower, he described it as "a military achievement of incalculable significance to the whole world. . . . This great and glorious victory."

To Montgomery he telegraphed: "Your triumphant passage of the Rhine into the heart of enemy territory has stirred us deeply."

Baruch to Visit London; Elmer Davis Arrives

CHINESE NAME RED LEADER TO FRISCO PARLEY

CHUNGKING, China, March 26 (AP).—The Chinese communist leader Tung Pi-wu was disclosed today as one of the 10 Chinese delegates to the world security conference at San Francisco, but doubt was expressed whether the Communists would be satisfied with only one representative. Tung is the former representative of the Chinese Communists in Chungking.

Other delegates include Miss Wu Yi-fang, Michigan educated president of Neinling college; Li Hwang, leader of China's Youth party; and Carson Chang, head of the Chinese National Socialists. The delegation, as announced previously, will be headed by acting premier and Foreign Minister T. V. Soong.

Other delegates named were Dr. Chung Hui-wang, secretary general of China's supreme national defense council; Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, ambassador to Britain; Dr. Wei Tao-ming, ambassador to Washington; Dr. Hu Shih, former ambassador to Washington, and Hu Lin, managing director of the newspaper Ta Kung Pao. Dr. S. Alfred Sze, former ambassador to the United States, was named senior adviser to the delegation.

SENATORS PLAN TRIP TO EUROPE TO SURVEY WAR

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—A half dozen senators are going to Europe next month for a survey of military operations and economic conditions, to give the senate first hand information on war end problems.

Chief objective of the group, members said today, will be to find out what the army intends to do with billions of dollars in equipment and supplies when German resistance collapses and the full weight of the war is shifted against the Japanese.

Arrangements have been made for Senators Russell [D., Ga.], Hill [D., Ala.], Chandler [D., Ky.], Maybank [D., S. C.], and Bridges [R., N. H.] to make the trip. The group will start in about two weeks. Sen. Revercomb [R., W. Va.] may be added to the list or may replace Bridges if the latter is unable to go. Sen. Pepper [D., Fla] also wants to go.

GEN. IKE CONFERS WITH BRADLEY, HODGES, PATTON

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, March 26 (AP).—Gen. Eisenhower and Lieutenant Generals Bradley, Patton, and Hodges met today in United States 1st army territory east of the Rhine in what was described officially as "a significant conference."

There was a feeling of victory in the air as Eisenhower rode in a jeep across a pontoon bridge. [He thus became the first allied supreme commander in history to cross the Rhine into Germany during a war.]

Chamberlain's Hotel.

Declaring he expected Hodges' 1st army to "to lick everybody they come up against," Eisenhower said: "They did it all the way across France, and I see no reason why they should stop on the road to Berlin."

Huddle Before 1st Army Map.

Bradley, the 12th army group commander, chatted with his old friends of the 1st army. Eisenhower and Hodges huddled at one of the maps showing the progress of the 1st army's breakout drive from the bridgehead since its attack exploded before dawn on Sunday.

The hotel overlooks the Rhine from atop the 1,086 foot high Petersberg mountain. From its windows Eisenhower could look down on the valley where Hodges' men had fought in from the river, built up a strong force and then struck out eastward.

SHARP PATROL CLASHES MARK ACTION IN ITALY

ROME, March 26 (AP).—Activity along the Italian front was hidden today under a brief announcement that "patrols were active," but the action was sharp and violent wherever the probing parties reached their objectives. There were a number of stiff small arms fights.

Both sides were aggressive in investigating opposing lines, particularly in the mountainous area southwest of Bologna. In one clash in that sector an American patrol killed 11 Nazis. In another three Germans were killed without loss to the Americans.

A strong enemy patrol of about 40 men attacked 8th army positions near Faenza, but was repulsed by small arms and mortar fire.

300 BILLION DEBT LIMIT BILL PASSES SENATE

Washington, D. C., March 26—(AP).—The senate passed legislation boosting the national debt limit to 300 billion dollars and sent the bill, already approved by the house, to the President.

Passage of the bill was accompanied by a demand from Sen. Taft [R., O.] for an immediate administration survey of post-war financing. He said post-war inflation can be stopped only by getting back to a balanced budget "just as quickly as possible."

He declared half of the departments "are demanding more money to spend to prevent depression" and the other half "are warning us against inflation."

TRIBUNE WRITER CROSSES RHINE WITH 7TH ARMY

Big Guns Open Way for Patch's Men.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY EAST OF THE RHINE, March 26.—Lt. Gen. Patch's 7th army is across the Rhine and moving on in an afternoon bright with sun.

In every way the crossing appears to have been successful. At an early hour this morning units received the order they had so long awaited and began the crossing of the river. Once before in November after the break thru the Saverne gap, the 7th had been ready to go over north of Strasbourg, but the plan was changed. This time there was no altering the operation.

Germans Show Suspicion.

The Germans had shown their suspicions for several hours before midnight Monday, periodically shelling and mortaring the west bank and sending over bombers and dropping flares to observe our traffic movements. American anti-aircraft batteries struck back, claiming at least three enemy planes destroyed.

We saw one of those destructions. The plane had just dropped a flare when it seemed that every ack-ack crew for miles around began firing at it. The flare and the bright tracings of ack-ack lighted up a sky in which the moon was obscured by mists. And the sky was even more ablaze as the German Junkers 88 disrupted from the ground assault.

Recalls Volturno Crossing.

At 2 p. m. hundreds of big guns in one sector of the American line opened up. The adjacent sector was not using any artillery preparation.

The thunder of the guns and their wreathing of the eastern bank in flame recalled the spectacle of the breaking of the Germans' Volturno river defense in October, 1943, but now the Americans were at a more symbolic river, a river varying on our front from 900 to 1,300 feet in width, 20 to 30 times the span of the Volturno.

After 30 minutes of artillery concentration the infantry started over the Rhine. Some were pinned down by spasmodic German machine gun and mortar fire and couldn't reach the west bank at once.

Our tank destroyers from a distance west of the bank pounded the enemy positions as they were disclosed and our artillery resumed its battering.

10,000 Northern Irish May Lose Jobs in Aircraft Cut

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 26.—Ten thousand Northern Ireland aircraft workers face unemployment, it was reported tonight, as a result of the ministry of aircraft production's decision to cut the output of Stirling bombers and Sunderland flying boats. J. Lowden, electrical trades union official, said in Belfast two factories already were closed and seven others would shut down within the next three months.

RUSSIANS GAIN IN 3-WAY DRIVE TOWARD VIENNA

LONDON, March 27 [Tuesday]—(AP).—Russian tank spearheads, pursuing Nazi forces across almost conquered Hungary, lunged within 31 miles of Austria and 69 miles southeast of Vienna's city limits yesterday as Moscow and Berlin disclosed that a great three-pronged push toward Germany's backdoor now was underway.

While elements of the 2d and 3d Ukraine armies swept toward Vienna along the south bank of the Danube and battered within 16 miles of Gyor, key strongpoint in Vienna's defense triangle, Moscow announced another drive toward Vienna had been launched beyond the north bank of the Danube.

There, amid Czechoslovakia's Carpathian peaks, the Russians captured Banska Bystrica, 125 miles east of Vienna, after crossing a 36 mile stretch of the Hron river. At the same time, Berlin said that these soviet forces had launched a powerful offensive across the Hron 92 miles east of Vienna and had captured the west bank fortress of Nagykalna.

The third offensive toward Austria was moving along the Sudeten mountains from Upper Silesia.

21,000 Nazi Captured.

As the mighty soviet offensives raced toward the Bratislava gap, key to Vienna, Russian forces in northern Europe took 21,000 trapped Germans prisoner along the East Prussian beaches and were storming Emaus, a half mile west of Danzig, after capturing Heele and Pelonken, one mile west and northwest of the former free city.

Supported by American bombers which blasted Austrian and Hungarian cities within 36 miles of the advancing Russians, Marshal Tolbukhin's 3d Ukraine army advanced up to nine miles on a 65 mile front across northwestern Hungary, seizing more than 100 towns and villages, Moscow announced.

In the center, Tolbukhin's troops captured the key 11-way road and rail center of Papa, in a four mile advance which cut the vital railroad and highway linking outflanked Gyor, 25 miles to the northeast, with American bombed Szombathely near the Austro-Hungarian border.

Shattering enemy defenses below Gyor based on this railroad-highway line, Tolbukhin's troops hammered within 31 miles of the frontier and were six miles from the Marcal river, Vienna's first defense line.

These forces were 65 miles southeast of Wiener Neustadt, Austrian aircraft manufacturing center bombed by the United States 15th air force.

Capture Transit Base.

Fifteen miles south of Papa, other spearheads stormed and captured the transit hub of Devecser, while between these forces advance tanks and cavalry ground out their deepest advance of nine miles to win Doba, 36 miles east of Szombathely, another vital stronghold in the Austrian capital's southeastern defenses. The Russians were 90 miles east of Grasz, important industrial city in the Austrian Alps.

At the southern end of the front, Tolbukhin's men advanced five miles along the west bank of Lake Balaton to take Balatonudvari and the lake's Tihany peninsula.

The bitterest battle raged at the northern end of Tolbukhin's front, where stubborn resistance was holding up the advance of Marshal Malinovsky's 2d Ukraine army pressing toward Komarom and Gyor along the Danube's south bank.

The Russians drove on Gyor from the south and captured Lovaszpatona, 16 miles from Gyor. This was their closest approach to Vienna and they also were 53 miles southeast of Bratislava, Slovak capital on the Danube's north bank.

The Nazis said Malinovsky was pouring powerful forces across the Hron near Leva [Levice] and said that an all-out offensive to break across the Bratislava plains leading 68 miles westward to the Bratislava gap was in progress.

Malinovsky's offensive suggested an immediate companion assault by Gen. Petrov's 4th Ukrainian army in the Carpathian mountains southeast of Moravska-Ostrava.

Along the Sudeten mountains, Marshal Konev's 1st Ukrainian army was battling to cross the rugged peaks from upper Silesia and burst into the Moravian gap leading to both Vienna and Prague.

German broadcasts meanwhile said that striking power was increasing in the forefield of Berlin's defenses with Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army striking for a breakthru to Seelow, apex of a defense triangle beyond the Red army's reported bridgeheads across the Oder and 27 miles east of Berlin.

Reds Push On Into Austria

Green Calls Browder Boast Proof of Infiltration by Reds

A warning that communism is using the war to screen its infiltration strategy was given by Gov. Green yesterday in commenting on Earl Browder's assertion that Communists occupy a favorable position in New Deal post-war plans because of their "essential" contributions to President Roosevelt's reelection.

The governor was one of several leaders who commented on Browder's statement which was made as president of the Communist Political association and published in a pamphlet entitled "America's Decisive Battle." Except for Mayor Kelly, who termed it "egotism," the others agreed that Browder's boast was definitely threatening, particularly in view of evidence that he is already benefitting from his alliance with the administration.

Green Cites Previous Reminders.

"I have said in the past that the Communists were seeking to work behind the backs of an unsuspecting and patriotic public, busy with war tasks, attempting to infiltrate themselves into various organizations and into the very councils of government," said Gov. Green.

"Now it appears that Browder is openly claiming some success in these efforts. We should not permit war time confusion to relax our vigilance against communist influences. They have no place in our American system of government."

Browder's pamphlet is evidence that the Communist party, which was declared dissolved last year when the Communist Political association was formed, is still alive, said the Rev. E. V. Daly, editor of the Catholic newspaper, the New World.

"In this provocative pamphlet, Mr. Browder is simply sounding the battlecry of the old internationale as befitting Moscow's American mouthpiece," he said. "His admitted allegiance to the party line is at least honest. No one ever thought the burial of the comintern was a bona fide funeral. The brochure might help in this—it might jolt millions of Americans from a complacent slumber which a strong, prosperous America has induced."

Reuben G. Soderstrom, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, noted Browder's assertion that communist influence was increasing in labor organizations. Soderstrom said his federation and the AFL would continue their fight on communism, and added:

"We are determined that communism shall have no place in the trade union movement, which in Russia is not free."

Tyrrell Recalls F. D. R.'s Leftism.

John F. Tyrrell, chairman of the Republican state committee, said: "The startling claims of Earl Browder, ex-convict and notorious draft dodger, are echoed in President Roosevelt's statement at a press conference at the time of his inauguration, when he said his policy would be 'to the left.' There is much evidence in the operation of our government under the New Deal as proof of Browder's claims."

Mayor Kelly, whose important role in the fourth term campaign included generalship at the Democratic national convention and a major share of credit for holding Illinois for the President, brushed off Browder's claims.

"I don't see how he can support such a claim any more than many others," said the mayor. "It sounds ridiculous for any one man or group to take the big share of credit, but I guess nothing can stop egotism."

30,000 BRITISH BRIDES SEEK TO ENTER CANADA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 26.—Thirty thousand British girls married to Canadian soldiers are negotiating with the Canadian government for permission to go to Canada to set up homes before the end of the war, it was reported tonight.

Their applications are sponsored by the Canadian Wives' Bureau of Information and Help center, set up in London by the Canadian government. Already 8,000 brides have left England, many taking furniture for an entire house and even their pet dogs with them.

British authorities have allocated 12 rest centers for use as hotels until the wives sail. Special facilities are provided for baby care.

BROWDER BOAST HE PUT F. D. R. IN IRKS DEMOCRATS

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—Earl Browder's boast that the Communist Political association of which he is president was largely responsible for the reelection of President Roosevelt and is highly influential in the New Deal evoked varied comment in the capital today.

Sen. Lucas.

To Democratic leaders the Browder claims were visibly unpalatable. They disavowed the preponderance of Communist influence in their party. The Republicans thought events proved the soundness of Browder's assertions.

Typical of the reaction of Democratic leaders was that of Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.]. "I disagree with Mr. Browder," said Lucas. "The Communists are on the wane. The only influence they had in the last election was adverse to the New Deal. If Browder had been on the other side, Mr. Roosevelt would have rolled up a bigger majority than he did. The New Deal is not listening to the Communists and it doesn't want them."

Rides on Coattails.

Sen. Byrd [D., Va.] said that "Browder has, of course, been riding on the coattails of the New Deal for years. I don't think he has taken over yet, and I don't think he will."

Republican views follow:

Rep. Short [R., Mo.]—Browder's boast confirms what those of us who are fighting to keep democracy have warned for years. The Communists have swallowed the New Deal from head to tail. This was evident in the last election and is evident in the Communist-New Deal legislation we see brought before congress every day. The leftwing is actually tightening its grip on the nation, with the blessing of the New Deal. It is past time for the Republican leadership in congress and the nation to wake up and act to save democracy.

Time to Run Them Out.

Rep. Shafer [R., Mich.]—Browder and his boys have taken over Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal, and they don't care who knows it. When they are cocky enough to come out in the open and boast about it, congress and the nation should take the offensive and run them out. The New Deal won't do it, so the only way to save the nation from Moscow is to fight the New Deal until 1948 and then defeat it. It is a job for the Republican party.

Rep. Mason [R., Ill.]—Browder, Hillman & Co. are riding high—certainly they won the election for Roosevelt, and they still are wielding their power in the nation. They must be stopped.

Browder's claims were made in a report to the Communists' national committee.

"We are holding the first meeting of our national committee since the founding of our association last May, following the dissolution of the Communist party," said Browder. "It is in order, therefore, to make something of a summary analysis of where our organization stands as a result of the tremendous world events and of the changes in our own organization.

Judgments Confirmed.

"Our basic judgments on the political currents of our country and the world have been confirmed by events.

"Our interpretation of Tehran has been confirmed by Crimea.

"Our forecast of the national elections was confirmed by the voters on Nov. 7.

"Our own policies and work contributed essentially to the victory of Nov. 7, and thereby directly to the consummation at Yalta.

"Our guidance to the broad labor and progressive movement on current questions of the day, sometimes given in sharp if temporary conflict with some of our best friends, has in each case been quickly proved by later events to be sound and correct.

Influence Grows.

"Our political influence within the labor and progressive organizations and communities has grown far wider and deeper than it ever was before.

"Our own organization is more unified than ever, it grows, and it carries on more work in a more efficient manner with more results.

"We are gradually breaking down and dissolving the barriers built up against us over a generation by the dominant forces in American society, as is witnessed by the action of the United States army in abolishing the old discriminations directed against Communists.

"We can confidently look forward to even more fundamental and dramatic confirmations of the correctness of the political path which we mapped and entered upon last May in our convention.

Gives Marxism Credit.

"All of our success flows from the fact that over the years we had equipped ourselves with the highest of sciences, Marxism, the science of history which enables us not only to understand events but to help shape them; because we understood that Marxism is not a dogma but a guide to action in the present unique historical moment."

Browder, who is soviet Russia's principal unofficial propagandist in this country, said in his report that "Marxists of all lands aspire to serve their own countries with something of the effectiveness displayed by the Marxists of the soviet union under the leadership of the greatest Marxist, Stalin." In the liberated countries of Europe no government, said Browder, "Can make the slightest claim to stability unless it includes the Communists."

Most of his report Browder devoted to rallying support for the Yalta decisions, particularly the formulation of the Dumbarton Oaks world peace plan at the forthcoming San Francisco conference. He lauded Mr. Roosevelt to the skies and called criticism of Yalta by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Washington Times-Herald, New York Daily News, and the Hearst papers "indistinguishable from the Berlin radio." Among those he placed "on Hitler's list" were Sen. Wherry [R., Neb.], Rep. O'Konski [R., Wis.], John L. Lewis, and David Dubinsky. He put Gov. Dewey on the doubtful list and Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] on probation.

PATTON'S ARMY TRAVELING ROAD NAPOLEON TOOK

Americans Follow Lines of Historic Campaigns.

BY WILLIAM WISNER.

Gen. Patton's 3d army in its campaign which threatens to split the German center follows historic lines of march, in particular those used by Napoleon in the wars against Austria and Prussia.

The parallel is notably pertinent in connection with the die-hard Nazi threat to retreat to the mountains of Germany and Austria and there wage a glorified guerrilla resistance. If Patton succeeds in cutting thru the enemy center, splitting the German west front into units, he will have accomplished in a remarkably short time the feat which occupied Bonaparte during 1805 and 1806.

In the campaign of 1805 against Austria, the French Emperor, gathering his forces from widespread cantonments in Holland, the channel ports, and Paris, carried out the threat implicit in his reply to Prussia which had sought his promise to consider South German states as neutral areas. Regarding this, in 1803, he wrote, "It is on the road from Strasbourg to Vienna that the French must force peace on Austria."

The Path to Austerlitz.

He intended to traverse the Danube valley from its source. But information that Russia was about to send an army thru Bohemia to join the Austrians caused him to shift his planned crossings of the Rhine from the south to the region where it is joined by the Neckar. Mack, the Austrian general, was entrenched at Ulm, on the Danube. Napoleon, learning of this disposition of his enemy, moved his armies thru the defiles of the Black Forest, swung in a wide circle, east of Ulm, as an interposition to the Russian threat, then struck westward from Augsburg, encircling and defeating the Austrians at Elchingen, six miles from Ulm, Oct. 14, 1805. The campaign culminated in Napoleon's defeat of the Austrian and Russian allies at Austerlitz a month later.

In the campaign of 1806, against Prussia, the French had been encamped, since Austerlitz, in the Thuringian forest and the headwaters of the Main, and here they rested until the fall. At that time Napoleon wrote to one of his marshals, "It is my intention to concentrate my entire right flank along the area between the Rhine and Bamberg."

Moves Against Prussians.

This is the line of Patton's present advanced, and from such positions 139 years ago Napoleon moved against the Prussians, who were at first deployed along the east-west line from Erfurt to what is now the Czechoslovak frontier.

Advancing northward from his headquarters at Bamberg, his troops debouching from the fastnesses of the forest, the emperor defeated the advance forces at Saalfeld. The Prussians and Saxons meanwhile closed up their lines to concentrate in the Erfurt-Weimar-Jena triangle. Here, on the anniversary of Elchingen, Napoleon won the battle of Jena.

The line of the Main meanders across central Germany, roughly at a right angle from the middle Rhine as the latter flows thru the reich. Along this line speeds an American army which may blast Hitler's hopes of holding an inner fortress in Germany.

How Napoleon's Armies Drove Into Germany

Broken lines terminating in arrows show the principal routes of penetration from the Rhine into Germany used by Napoleon in his campaigns against Austria and Prussia and their allies in 1805-'06. That leading from the Saarland closely approximates the route being traversed by Gen. Patton's 3d army.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, March 26.—Twenty-five thousand tons of Krupp steel, taken from Krupp plants at Rheinhausen and Krefeld in Germany by advancing American forces, now is being used to build bridges across the Rhine, communications zone G. H. Q., announced here today.

Among the other booty captured and now being devoted to military uses are thousands of tons of ferromanganese and ferrosilicon, used in making steel, which has been shipped to Luxemburg. Millions of dollars in other engineer, railroad, ordnance, and quartermaster supplies was recovered.

Rolling Stock Recovered.

In the Gerolsheim-Sinzig sector, hundreds of box cars and flat cars as well as a huge quantity of railroad equipment were recovered, and at Rupertsberg the Americans took flat cars loaded with vehicles and an ammunition train of 26 cars.

A large steel warehouse containing valuable engineering and railroad equipment was captured at Hoenningen, and near Waldorf the Americans found a German ammunition dump and a large lumber mill turning out piles and railroad ties, which are being put to immediate use.

Cement Factories Taken.

Among other valuable installations and equipment captured which is being used by the allies now were cement factories, coal and coke, hundreds of telephone poles, steel I-beams, channels, angles, and carbon electrodes.

The production of the Krupp plants around Krefeld had been cut from 120,000 tons of ingot steel monthly to 30,000 tons, owing to the shortage of materials due to bombing of supply routes, and slowing down of work during air raid alerts, executives of the plants said.

RHINE GERMAN NO AGGRESSOR IN HIS OWN EYE

Counter-Propaganda Need Disclosed.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

COLOGNE, Rhineland, March 26.—No one is telling the Germans in the Rhineland why their cities have been smashed and their country occupied and, with a few exceptions, the average Rhinelander feels that he is a victim of a world conspiracy to destroy his country. Lack of any effective counter-propaganda service to offset Nazi propaganda is one of the most serious gaps in our program of occupation.

Only Defending Selves.

Tell these Germans that the Nazi policy of aggression has united most of the rest of the world against them and they shrug their shoulders and say that they were only trying to defend themselves. Explain that mass air attacks on their cities were merely a repetition of what they did at Rotterdam and tried to do to British cities and they will tell you that such tales are merely propaganda of the war mongers. Here is a typical example:

A high allied officer yesterday inspected a German house which had been requisitioned for his use in one of the towns of the Rhineland. The German family had been given almost a week's notice that they would have to move next door and share a large house with their neighbors. When the officer arrived the woman of the house wept and asked what Germany had ever done that her citizens were so ill-used.

War Glorified.

"We Germans are a kindly, gentle people," she said, "please be lenient with us."

A book salvaged from the ruins of Cologne is called "The Whole World Against Us." It was published a year after Hitler came into power. Its aim was to glorify the German soldier and war itself and to convince readers that Germany lost the last war only because of the massive resources marshalled against her.

DULLES TERMS OAKS PLAN ONLY THE FIRST STEP

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—John Foster Dulles described the Dumbarton Oaks security plan tonight as no more than a first step toward organized world peace.

The development of actual working machinery, the lawyer said, is a matter for the years and the evolution of international law. But he backed the Dumbarton proposals as having value for the purpose of bringing the nations together in the fellowship from which that law could develop.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 26.—Its normal population of 24,000 reduced to 18,000, without water, electricity, or organized food supply, the German town of Lintfort was set back on its feet within 10 days after it was taken by the United States 35th division, it was revealed at communications zone headquarters here today.

The division's military government [AMG] section, headed by Lt. Col. George L. Schneider, former Brooklyn lawyer, took over the city less than 12 hours after the infantry started battling in its outskirts. The famous Lintfort coal mine, the largest in Germany, which in the early days of the war had produced 6,000 tons daily, was practically nonoperative. But by the 10th day the mine was cleared of gas, 12,000,000 gallons of water had been pumped out, and 500 men went down to dig its tunnels.

By the fifth day banks had reopened, milk routes were in operation, mills and bakeries were going again, fresh meat was being sold on a ration basis, a hospital had been improvised under the supervision of the German Red Cross, and homeless old people were sheltered and cared for in the Hitler Youth center. The people are obeying occupation regulations.

FRONT IN DANGER OF BEING SPLIT, GERMANS TOLD

'Fight on Tho Situation May Appear Hopeless.'

LONDON, March 26 (AP).—Nazi propagandists pleaded with the German people tonight to fight on "tho the situation may appear hopeless," and military commentators warned that the German western front was in danger of being split at Frankfurt-on-Main.

Transocean's Guenther Weber asserted that "to the Germans it is immaterial whether we hold a mile of ground more or less, but it is vital for us to maintain a continuous front from the Swiss frontier to Holland."

An official Berlin military spokesman said, "The decisive fighting of the whole war now is unequivocally in the west."

Propagandist Dr. Rudolph Semmler said "we must not lose our courage, strength, or self-confidence. We've kept our heads over other situations which appeared to be hopeless so why should we act otherwise now."

"Out to Force Decision."

He conceded, however, that Germany was in the direst straits for material.

"Don't let's deceive ourselves about the present serious situation," said the D. N. B. home service. "In the east and west our enemies besiege and storm against Fortress Germany hoping to crush our resistance by grand style, synchronized offensives . . . Eisenhower and Montgomery are out to force a decision at all costs.

"But we must show them that it can't be a Sunday afternoon walk into the central reich. Our slogan must and will be 'Kill the enemy wherever you meet him. Don't waver or give way. Drown the enemy in his own blood. If Germany is destined to become a graveyard let us make it the graveyard of our enemies.'"

A German underground report said Field Marshal Von Model, commander of the German northern armies, had been wounded on March 16, by a bomb, necessitating the summons of Field Marshal Kesselring from Italy to take charge of the western front after Field Marshal Von Rundstedt was removed.

Report 2 Generals Removed.

Another report said two generals and an air force marshal had been removed as the result of sharp differences among various air force chiefs and the Nazi high command. Those reported removed were Field Marshal Wolfram von Richthofen, cousin of the famous World war ace, who had been in charge of the German air force armament; Maj. Gen. Deichmann, air force chief in Italy, and Lt. Gen. Fiedig, air force chief in the Balkans and Hungary.

Rumors that Reichmarshal Goering, chief of the air force, had been arrested also were heard in foreign capitals.

Stress Two Front War.

LONDON, March 26 [Reuters].—Chief Reich Propagandist Goebbels has ordered German newspapers to stress the two front assault, the German radio stated today. Editors were instructed to headline today's German war bulletin "Enemy large scale offensive from east and west," the agency added.

Capt. Sertorius, military commentator of the Transocean news agency, admitted that the Germans were unable to halt the allied advance in the lower Rhine bridgehead.

"The allied air landing troops dropped between the upper Issel, the lower Lippe, and the Escher canal are being constantly reenforced," he said.

"The fact that elements of the United States 9th army have taken part in Rhine crossings can by no means discount the possibility that the 9th army is preparing another large scale crossing of the river in the sector between Duesseldorf and Cologne."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 26.—One thousand troops have been drafted into the Leith dockyards to handle vital cargoes, it was revealed tonight as the government condemned the strike of 1,000 dock workers as unjustified. The government statement added there would be no negotiations until work was resumed, and talks would be held only with accredited union officials. "Military labor will be employed on vital cargoes to the extent and for so long as the government deems necessary," the statement concluded. The strike began March 19.

Back in London

LONDON, March 26—(AP).—Prime Minister Churchill was back in Britain tonight after twice crossing the Rhine to see British and American forces combining in the "one big heave" which he previously had said would win the war. He is expected to give the house of commons a first-hand account of the drive east of the Rhine before parliament adjourns Thursday for the Easter holiday.

INDIAN TROOPS KILL 500 JAPS IN BURMESE TOWN

CALCUTTA, India, March 26 (AP).—Indian troops driving 10 miles up the trunk railway northward from Meiktila, have captured the important highway junction of Myittha, 40 miles south of Mandalay, and slaughtered another 500 trapped Japanese, allied headquarters disclosed today.

Indicative of the demoralized state of enemy troops and communications in central Burma, the armored sweep took the Japanese by such complete surprise that a half-eaten meal was on the table in the officers' mess in Myittha when the Indians smashed into the town.

Bitter fighting was reported in the vicinity of Meiktila, where the Japanese were making desperate infiltration attacks every night in an effort to impede the flow of supplies to allied forces. An average of 500 Japanese were being killed daily. Since January 16,500 enemy dead had been counted. Heavy fighting also was reported in the area east of Taungtha and Myingyam, northwest of Meiktila.

U. S. BOMBERS GO TO SUPPORT OF RED OFFENSIVE

LONDON, March 26 (AP).—American heavy bombers from Britain and Italy smashed German industrial targets and communication lines in support of the Russian eastern offensive today and an 8th air force staff officer said the switch indicated allied armies in the west had the "situation well enough in hand to warrant the shift."

Tonight R. A. F. Mosquitos bombed Berlin for the 35th consecutive night.

For the first time in a week American heavy bombers went back to the familiar job of blasting German oil refineries. A force of more than 300 Fortresses escorted by 450 Mustangs attacked two oil plants, a gun factory and an armored car works in southeastern Germany.

Attack Rail Lines.

Fortresses of the United States 15th air force lent their support to the Russian drive by attacking rail yards at Szombathely, Brueck, Straszhof and Wiener Neustadt in Austria and Mustangs raked rail lines between Vienna and Czechoslovakia.

Lt. Gen. Eaker, chief of the Mediterranean allied air force, said the German air force is "virtually grounded; I mean just that."

The Britain based 8th air force heavy bombers and fighters split into two task forces over Leipzig. One went after a synthetic oil plant and a natural oil refinery at Zeitz, 20 miles south of Leipzig, while the other flew to Plauen, 10 miles from the border of Czechoslovakia, and blasted a gun factory and armored car works.

Berlin Raided From East.

The German radio reported that battered Berlin was attacked from the east during the day, indicating that Red army planes were adding their weight to the blows.

Eighth air force bombers and fighters attacked targets in Zeitz and Plauen without opposition from the German air force.

Sgt. John Sapko of 1301 Blake avenue, Racine, Wis., observed a big artillery duel near Frankfurt-on-Main. Maj. Clayton Peterson of Pontiac, Ill., a Mustang pilot, said that United States 3d army troops "seemed to be sprawled all over Germany."

Fighter bombers destroyed what was believed to be an enemy headquarters at Kesteren, 15 miles northwest of Nijmegen, Holland.

Many British Women Lose Hair Thru V-Bomb Shock

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 26.—Many British women are losing their hair thru V-bomb shock, it was reported tonight. Leading wig makers were said to have more orders for toupees and artificial curls than they could fill. One firm was refusing any more orders this year. "Genuine victims of V-bombs," said the chief of a West End firm of wig makers, "will receive priority over people who wear wigs just for vanity."

65,000 FIGHTING MEN COMBED OUT OF G. I.s AT REAR

40,000 More Will Get Infantry Training.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, March 26.—The comb-out of United States rear echelons for combat troops, which began with the German break-thru in the Ardennes, already has resulted in the transfer of 65,000 soldiers to the front lines, it was disclosed today. Forty thousand more will soon be withdrawn for training for infantry service.

170,000 Foreigners Employed.

The release of soldiers for infantry units was achieved by making effective use of civilian volunteer workers, ex-combat soldiers who had been classified for limited assignment, and members of the WAC.

The army is employing 170,000 French, British, Dutch, Belgian, and Luxemburg civilians for almost every job from typing to stevedoring.

More WACs Requested.

The arrival of 7,500 WACs who hold assignments requiring special skill also helped relieve the man power situation. Thousands more have been requested from the United States.

Displaced persons—those forced from their homes because of the war—in many cases have volunteered to serve in mobile labor units rebuilding bridges and roads and working in clothing and salvage depots.

Son of Gen. De Gaulle Awarded Croix de Guerre

PARIS, March 26 (AP).—Lt. Philippe de Gaulle, son of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, was decorated with the croix de guerre by Maj. Gen. Jacques Leclerc at a ceremony in the French village of Berry today.

ARMY MEDICAL CHIEF BARRED FROM MANILA

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, chief of the army's medical corps, was among seven general officers barred from Manila by a blanket order of Gen. MacArthur when American troops first entered.

War department officials said today that when the move on Manila was at its height MacArthur ordered that none but operational personnel be allowed in the area. This, it was said, was because both the transportation system and the field facilities of the then skeletonized headquarters on Luzon were overtaxed by combat needs late in February and early in March.

Kirk, on an inspection tour of the Pacific area, had arrived at Leyte at about that time. He asked permission to go to Luzon, but encountered the MacArthur blanket order and was forced to remain at general headquarters. With the clean-up of resistance in Manila the ban was modified, the department said.

TRIBUNE ARTIST MEETS MIDWEST MEN OVER RHINE

Lists Names Taken on Two River Crossings.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY IN GERMANY, March 26.—Gary Sheahan, Chicago Tribune artist, in two trips across the Rhine met numerous midwesterners. They were:

Raymond Grabowski, fireman 1st class, 1524 W. Superior st., Chicago; Donald Hoge, fireman 1st class, Piano, Ill., both manning a landing craft that took him across the river; Lt. William T. Free, Vincennes, Ind.; Corp. Stanley Hornstrom, Alpha, Ill.; Capt. Robert H. Williams, Battle Creek, Mich.; Mess Sgt. William E. Hermann, 3054 N. Kilpatrick av., Chicago, who gave him a good meal cooked by Pvt. Robert R. Hartigan, 1704 Wallen av., Chicago, and Corp. Frank Williams, 6152 S. Campbell av., Chicago. The last three are members of the famous 11th infantry, a 5th division outfit which spearheaded the Rhine crossing.

He also met Lt. Evan D. Dildine, Delphos, Kas., 204th combat engineer battalion platoon leader, whose men manned the boats for the first wave of infantry across the Rhine. It was their 10th river crossing. With him were Corp. Stanley Twardak, 4812 S. Laflin st., Chicago, and Corp. Louis Chodora, Milwaukee, Wis.

Dive for Foxholes.

As Sheahan was taking these names a Nazi plane pulled a sneak raid and bombed and strafed. The names and drawings were trampled underfoot as all dove for foxholes, convincing Sheahan the bridgehead was quite unsafe.

Then he met Pvt. Anthony Balsano, 1275 Augusta blvd., Chicago, who complained that every one gets his name in THE TRIBUNE but him; saw a truck named "Fox River, Ill.," with Pvt. Julian Szydlo, 1529 W. Chestnut st., Chicago, at the wheel and beside him Pvt. Peter A. Sawisch, 4024 N. Prairie av., Chicago. The truck was named after the town where Szydlo's parents live. Later he met and sketched Pvt. Arthur Hadden, 5123 Bernard st., Chicago, and Sgt. Edward Bagwell, 2534 W. 40th st., Chicago, and Staff Sgt. William H. Victor, born in Chicago, whose sister, Mrs. Mary Paoli, lives at 3122 N. Luna av., Chicago.

Anti-Aircraft Battery.

At an anti-aircraft battery protecting the bridges were Pvt. Pat Pompa, Blue Island, Ill.; Pvt. Irving Gross, 5000 N. Kimball av., Chicago, both cannoneers, and Corp. Gordon Nelson, Muscoda, Wis.; Corp. Robert L. Gibbons, Magnolia, Minn.; Corp. Raymond Lange, and Tech. Sgt. Russ Gunderson, both of Laverne, Minn., who agreed with the Tribune artist that the bridgehead was very unhealthy and were thankful that they probably were beyond range of enemy artillery now.

YANK TRAPPED BY NAZIS FREED WITHIN MONTH

CAIRO, Egypt, March 17 [Delayed]—(AP).—Corp. James Hesse, 20, of Wichita, Kas., one of approximately 1,200 Americans who arrived at a mideast port today aboard a repatriation ship after their escape from the Germans during the soviet winter offensive, made the round trip from freedom to prisoner to freedom again in little more than a month.

He was captured during Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's Ardennes offensive while fighting inside the Siegfried line. He was freed by the Russians a little more than a month later.

Hesse said he was marched east for a few days after his capture and then shipped in a boxcar to a camp near Altburgand, Poland. "Less than a month after we got there," he said, "the Germans ordered the camp broken one night—Jan. 20 I believe—and we started walking west. I didn't know where we were going—just went. We kept marching for a couple of days and then decided to get away. A lot of us hid in old barns or houses and the Poles did everything possible for us and hid us for a long time while the Germans were still moving by. We decided to try to get back east. We heard Warsaw was a collecting point so we just hitchhiked along with the Russians going that way. Then we were moved down to Odessa and here I am."

Awaiting Husband

Mrs. A. L. Anderson and her son, Alex III., as they arrived at Chicago airport yesterday for reunion here with Lt. Anderson.

Nonarrival of a navy lieutenant from the South Pacific postponed a scheduled reunion at the airport yesterday, but the wife, Mrs. Alexander L. Anderson, and her son, Alexander III., 3 months, arrived from Dallas, Tex. Lt. Anderson is expected today or tomorrow, and the family will continue on to Grays Bay, Wayzata, Minn., to visit with his mother, Mrs. Dana Stone. Mrs. Anderson is known professionally as Eunice Topper, radio actress.

JAPS SERVING AS ALLIED SPIES TO BE REWARDED

LONDON, March 26 (AP).—The United States and Australia have submitted to the allied war crimes commission lists of Japanese war criminals, it was reported today.

While there were no specific details of the United States list, the Australian roll was understood to include 83 Japanese army officers responsible for atrocities against allied troops and civilians, and in some instances cited whole battalions and divisions.

The allies also are understood to have submitted lists of Japanese whom the allies wished to reward for services, such as acting as spies for the allies.

Nazis Deny Giving Orders to Execute Paratroopers

LONDON, March 26 (AP).—German military authorities were quoted in a Transocean agency broadcast today as denying "Eisenhower's allegation" that they had issued orders to execute allied parachute troops. The broadcast said the allied air borne troops were "being attacked according to the recognized rules of warfare."

Wordy Battle Over Tanks Rages on Both Sides of Sea

'They're No Good'

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KREFELD, Germany, March 26.—Tank officers and men are incensed over statements attributed to Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell Jr., chief of ordnance in Washington, D. C., that American tanks are the best in the world.

They criticize Campbell's boast following his visit to the western front several weeks ago, where he confined himself, they say, to discussions solely with army and corps commanders and never once to interviewing actual tankers to hear their complaints.

Chaplain Complains.

The tankers resent the fact that the American tax payer is ready to pay any price for the finest equipment and that American industry is able to produce the best weapons, but red tape, conservatism, and the refusal to learn the big shots in Washington, make them sitting ducks for the German panzers.

A tank battalion chaplain said today: "I feel like a hypocrite when I must write a letter of condolence to the mothers and wives of these boys killed in inferior tanks, because they are entitled to expect the government to provide the best equipment obtainable. You cannot mention my name or I'd be court martialed; but that's the gospel truth. In 1943 in Africa we saw the effects of Nazi high velocity guns and heavy, properly sloped armor, but the ordnance department learned nothing and made no improvements."

Put Sandbags on Tanks.

A tank captain who twice escaped death when his vehicle was shot up by German tanks, confirmed this.

"Look at the British," he said. "They accept lend-lease tanks, but rip out the turret and install their own 17 pounder gun, which is nearly a match for the German 88. I'll show you our lads placing cement blocks and even sandbags along the front of their tanks to give them better protection. But that protection should be steel built into the tank and not a makeshift."

'They're All Right'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—Champions of the recently criticized American tanks are having their inning today, as they unload a triple volley at the critics. Its contents:

1. The respected magazine, Army Ordnance, is out with a leading editorial, flatly asserting that "our tanks are without equal."

2. The magazine offers as proof a statement to that effect from Lt. Gen. Patton—and backs it up with a similar but somewhat less forceful opinion expressed by Gen. Eisenhower.

3. Ordnance experts are citing the current performance turned in by Patton, using the same tanks, as the best possible answer to the critics.

Carries Much Weight.

The fact that Army Ordnance has taken up the cudgels for the criticized weapons means a lot in military circles, because the magazine is in a peculiar class. It is an authoritative, slick paper publication that carries a lot of high class advertising and throws considerable weight in industrial circles.

It is the official journal of the Army Ordnance association, which numbers 40,000 members and includes a host of civilian "big shots," headed by President Benedict Crowell of Cleveland. Its directors include Robert P. Lamont, Tom Girdler, K. T. Keller, and Congressman James W. Wadsworth. The magazine is edited by Col. Leo. A. Codd, an ordnance reserve officer.

"Without Equal"—Patton.

It quotes Patton, in a letter to Maj. Gen. L. H. Campbell Jr., chief of ordnance, who has himself just returned from the battle fronts, as follows: "Our machine guns, mortars, artillery, and tanks are without equal on the battlefields of the world." And the Eisenhower quotation reads: "We have knocked out twice as many tanks as we have lost. We have a general superiority in quality and quantity of our ordnance, a superiority that must always be maintained."

Said one officer:

"Gen. Campbell can do one of two things. He can give Patton the kind of tanks Patton says he wants, or he can give Patton the kind of tanks somebody else says he ought to have. But he can't satisfy both Patton and the critics. Which do you think he ought to listen to?"

Enemy Tanks Bigger.

The ordnance men do not deny charges that the Germans have larger, heavier tanks but point out that American commanders say they prefer lighter, more mobile weapons, which can cross small bridges and go places faster.

They say the speed of Patton's recent charge into Germany has pretty much proven their case; that he couldn't have moved nearly so fast nor gone so far with heavier weapons. And they claim this is the second time he's confounded the critics.

EXPERTS STUDY EUROPE'S NEEDS FOR STETTINIUS

LONDON, March 26 (AP).—Touring teams of state department efficiency experts will report back to Washington on the advisability of extending the work of United States delegations in the economic field after victory in Europe.

The plan still is in the "talking stage," but it was learned that a special mission now in Europe is studying the possibility of taking over many activities of such agencies as the foreign economic administration and war food administration, as well as absorbing some functions of the office of war information.

This action, subject to at least fiscal approval by congress, was reported as part of Secretary of State Stettinius' long-range objective to coördinate diplomatic and economic affairs abroad.

French Writer Wounded with 3d Army on Rhine

FINNS EXPECT MANNERHEIM TO YIELD TO REDS

BY ROBERT STURDEVANT.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, March 26 (AP). — Retirement of aging Field Marshal Mannerheim as president of the Finnish republic is expected shortly as the first step in bringing the government more closely in line with the leftward swing in recent elections.

Field Marshal Mannerheim.

Mannerheim generally is credited with doing an excellent job in holding the people together during armistice negotiations with Russia and the subsequent withdrawal of Finland from the war.

As the personification of Finland's heretofore strongly conservative and anti-Communist elements, Mannerheim is anything but popular with Moscow. He has been attacked several times by the soviet press and radio.

Passikivi Likely Successor.

I found on a recent trip to Finland that it is a foregone conclusion among most experts in Finland's political life that the new radical forces in parliament will try to compel Mannerheim to step down if he does not do so voluntarily.

There seems little doubt that he will be succeeded as president by Premier Joho Kosti Passikivi, who commands the confidence of almost all political segments.

While the radical Democratic Peoples' union won 25 per cent of the membership of parliament in the recent election, the immediate fulfillment of a broad program of close collaboration with Russia, the "rooting out of fascism," and effecting economic reforms depends on the degree of collaboration the leftists can obtain from the Social Democrats and the more liberal elements of the Conservative, Agrarian, and Swedish Peoples' parties.

Cay Sundstrom, editor of the leftist daily Vapaa Sana, said he thought there is a good prospect for coöperation between the Democratic Union and Social Democrats, as well as with "Democratic minded" persons from other parties.

Sundstrom, a former Social Democrat imprisoned for three years for leftist views, was elected to parliament.

Two facts may have a strong bearing on the new parliament's ability to "democratize" the government in line with soviet policy. These are that constitutional changes require a two-thirds vote of the parliament and proposals for constitutional changes require a five-sixth vote for immediate consideration, or otherwise must await action by the next term.

YANK MEDICS PUSH SO FAST THEY GET AHEAD OF GERMANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 27 [Tuesday].—Capt. John M. Garnello of Chicago was so absorbed bandaging wounded civilians when his medical battalion rolled into flaming Jackenbach on the third day of the Rhine push that at first he ignored the urgings of an armed German motor cyclist. Persistent digs, however, the army newspaper Stars and Stripes reported, caused him to look up. He saw a German commander waving furiously from a tank turret, with an armored column trailing in the rear. The Germans wanted to get to the Rhine, but the medics' ambulances and trucks blocked the highway.

"That's when the captain realized he was ahead of our infantry and not behind," said Pvt. Theodore Kober of Cudahy, Wis.

The captain, it was related, cleared the highway, but that was the only courtesy of the road offered the Germans. After the armored column had moved on the medics tipped off American artillery, which blew the Germans off the road.

Red Army's Former Chief of Staff Dies at Age of 62

LONDON, March 27 [Tuesday]—(AP).—The Moscow radio announced early today the death of Marshal Boris Shaposhnikov, 62, former chief of the general staff of the Russian army, and chief of the soviet supreme military academy. Shaposhnikov was chief of staff during the first year of Russia's war against Germany. He became ill in the autumn of 1942 and retired. He once served as a colonel in the czarist army.

Susie HOWLED...so would you

Susie is six years old. Born to a generation which has repudiated the "clinging-vine" philosophy, Susie intends to march through life on her own sturdy two legs. Her first sentence was —"Susie do it herself".

So it was quite logical that Susie insisted upon taking her own bath. Her self-reliance was stronger than her judgment. As she put her pink little foot into the water, she howled —and so would you. The water was scalding hot. Comes the hurrying parent —a quick appraisal of the situation —an arm reaching to the medicine chest —the spreading of soothing relieving ointment. Quick relief —smiles through the tears. Susie came out of it alright —maybe a wee bit weakened in self-reliance but certainly enriched in judgment.

The moral of the story is the medicine chest, the family first aid kit ever ready for emergencies. Tonight, take an inventory to be sure it is ready. Supply your short items at —

ODD CONTRASTS COME TO LIGHT IN YUGOSLAVIA

Belgrade Offers Plenty Amid Starvation.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 26.—Life in this ancient capital of Yugoslavia, freed five months ago after years of German occupation, is a strange spectacle to a newcomer fresh from liberated Italy. Everything seems different and occasionally almost unbelievable.

Most noticeable is the scarcity of British and American soldiers in contrast to the hordes of Tommies and Yanks who crowd Italian cities. There is only a handful here, officers and men attached to military missions, handling communications or performing other special duties.

Smartly turned out Russian officers and their drably clad soldiers walk about the streets or lounge in cafes and hotels. Bulgarians in fur caps, well made brown uniforms and boots also are here.

Then, there are the Partisans of Marshal Tito's liberation army, tough, determined looking men and women clad in whatever uniforms or scraps of uniforms and civilian clothing on which they can lay their hands. Every one carries some kind of gun, generally captured German weapons.

Hundreds on Leave.

Hundreds on leave from the front roam the city. Large detachments in training goose-step thru the streets, roaring their strange, minor keyed marching songs. Each public building, hotel, and municipal office has its guard. It's hard to become accustomed to being stopped and questioned by a pretty girl who holds a submachine gun and who has a Luger in her pocket instead of a handkerchief.

If an American housewife suddenly should be whisked to one of Belgrade's main streets she would think she landed in a pre-war fairyland despite the fact this city is less than 60 miles from the nearest German lines. Shops are filled with foodstuffs and merchandise. With the American dollar the only acceptable foreign currency in Belgrade, worth 3,500 Yugoslav dinars on the black market exchange, she could buy many things.

$1 to $2 for Silk Hose.

A $5 bill will buy almost more than one can carry. Five pound sausages are about $1 each, and eggs are 360 dinars or about 10 cents a dozen. Vegetables are so cheap on the dollar exchange they are almost given away.

Silk stockings range from 3,500 to 7,000 dinars or $1 to $2. Fine leather gloves go at $1 while heavy leather purses bring less than $2.

But the citizens of Belgrade, dependent solely on dinars, have to scrape to keep from starving. Since liberation of the city, wages have not kept pace with the cost of living. The lowest government clerks receive 6,000 dinars a month, which is the same salary the prima donna of the local opera gets. A man receiving 20,000 dinars a month is considered highly paid. Partisan soldiers receive no pay at all.

Food Bottleneck Grows.

The reason for the abundance of food here is this: Belgrade lies on the southern margin of rolling farmlands known as the Voyvodina plains. Before the war these plains sent their products to Belgrade for trans-shipment to other sections of Yugoslavia not self-sufficient, such as Dalmatia, Herzegovina, and Montenegro, along the mountainous Adriatic coastline. Since the war, however, it has become almost impossible to move food southward. Therefore, food piles up in Belgrade while the population in other sections faces starvation.

One of the first tasks of the united nations relief and rehabilitation mission, which will begin active operation here on April 15, will be to bring in hundreds of American motor trucks to solve this food distribution problem.

ICKES WOULD DELAY FREEDOM OF PHILIPPINES

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—Secretary Ickes said tonight the United States should "give the Philippines whatever it wants," but expressed the view that independence now would be harmful.

"We want to aid the Philippines, whose loyalty to the United States during the war has been above any possible question," the interior secretary said in an interview.

"But I fear that the war has made inroads into its economy, its peoples, and its government, too severe to permit a complete break with the United States at this time."

The comment by Ickes, whose department supervises insular affairs, came shortly after the senate passed and sent back to the house a deficiency appropriation bill which carries an authorization for $80,000 to pay the salaries of a high commissioner and assistants who would survey the economic position of the commonwealth.

Victims of Alaska Crash Flown Out.

COLD BAY, Alaska, March 23 [Delayed]—(AP).—Three injured survivors of a troop transport C-47 that crashed near Cathedral Valley, 20 miles from here, on March 18, were flown here today. They were brought in by Eric Schutte, a bush pilot, in a ski plane that had landed near the scene of the wreckage.

Plane Hits Precipice.

Those rescued, all injured but none critically, are Lt. Joseph R. Alexander, Merchantville, N. J., pilot; 2d Lt. Richard L. Cocanour, Snelling, Cal., co-pilot, and Sgt. Paul Sundermier, Delanco, N. J., aerial engineer.

The crash occurred in midmorning as the plane was letting down thru the overcast for a landing at Fort Randall. The ship hit part of precipice and all the survivors were knocked unconscious.

Searching planes sighted them that afternoon and dropped supplies.

The next day passengers on planes bound east from the Aleutian Islands volunteered to jump down to the scene. The first to go were Capt. P. H. Shoelander, arctic expert with Hubert Wilkins' cold weather test crews in Alaska and former Swathmore [Pa.] college professor; a chaplain, Capt. William P. Mull, Dubuque, Ia., and Capt. John Weston, Ardmore, Pa., a medical officer en route home.

3 More Chute Down.

Three others jumped the next day. They were Maj. George Johnson, Auburn, Ala., flight surgeon from Elmendorf field, Alaska; Pvt. Leonard E. Nemhouser, New Brunswick, N. J., and Pvt. Robert N. Goodling, Logansville, Pa., medics.

None of the six had ever jumped before but all landed within four miles of the wreckage.

KOISO DISCOVERS WAR SITUATION TO BE 'URGENT'

San Francisco, March 25 (AP).—Warning that the war situation "is becoming more and more urgent," Premier Koiso was quoted by the Tokyo radio today as saying the government is "consolidating the total strength" of Japan for the defense of the empire.

"The enemy's air raids against our homeland are about to be intensified," warned the premier, "and the possibility of our homeland being turned into a battleground is not unexpected. The government has sounded the clarion call to the people to rise to the occasion and to coöperate further with the government."

Japan's "people's volunteer army" being mobilized will include "graduates of the elementary school of the national school who are over 14 years of age, men below 60, and women younger than 45," Tokyo radio said.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 26.—The uncontested divorce suit of Actor Vic Oliver against Prime Minister Churchill's daughter, Sarah, was adjourned on a technicality today when Justice Henn Collins ruled it would be necessary for an American lawyer to provide proof of the marriage.

Charging desertion, Oliver testified the marriage was happy for two years after it took place in New York in 1936, but this period was followed by a series of quarrels. There were a number of reconciliations until 1940, when Mrs. Oliver's attitude was said to have changed. On Sept. 23, 1941, she joined the women's auxiliary air force [WAAF] after telling her husband she was going to leave the house and never return.

Oliver testified he was unable to get his wife to change her mind. On Aug. 15, 1944, he wrote asking her to return, but received a formal refusal from his wife's solicitors, he related. Oliver said he is an Austrian born United States citizen, but has been in England since 1932.

RED ARMY SAVES CIVILIZATION, RUSSIANS TOLD

MOSCOW, March 26 (AP).—Hailing the Red army in the countries from which the Germans have been driven as "saviors of world civilization and culture," Pravda said today that Russia respected the independence of other nations and was ready to live in friendship with her neighbors.

The Communist party newspaper addressed the article to Red army men and officers and to other soviet citizens who have gone into the lands freed of Nazi rule. The soviet citizen, Pravda said, "must be equal to his liberating mission."

Pravda warned that forces of fascism were trying to stir up feeling against soviet citizens abroad and told them to be particularly careful of their conduct and every action. Speaking of their "historical mission," the editorial concluded that "every one now recognizes that the soviet people, with their self-sacrificing struggle, have saved the civilization of Europe from fascist destruction."

CROWDS PROTEST AS BUENOS AIRES WAITS WAR CALL

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, March 26 (AP).—A series of anti-war demonstrations by Nationalist elements erupted today on the eve of a government foreign policy pronouncement which the demonstrators were convinced would put Argentina into the war on the side of the allies.

Mounted police broke up a demonstration before the United States embassy after the newspaper Critica said the government intended to "declare Argentina in a state of belligerence with the axis." Critica said the declaration would be made at the close of tomorrow's cabinet meeting.

The embassy demonstration came after Nationalists distributed leaflets urging the action "against war, and for peace and Argentine dignity."

Inching Toward War.

Argentina has been inching toward war for several weeks. The public had been primed for a declaration today. Newspaper men had been mobilized to hear a historic pronouncement, but after a three hour delay while the cabinet conferred with the army, navy, and air force chiefs, the announcement was put off until tomorrow. The demonstrations followed.

After being dispersed during the rush hour at the United States embassy, demonstrators milled around offices of the pro-democratic newspaper, La Nacion.

Some Are Jailed.

Police jailed some of the more intractable demonstrators but concentrated on keeping crowds moving. Part of Florida st., famed shopping artery and a favorite spot for demonstrations, was roped off.

A government press department bulletin said the public "can be absolutely sure the government will take no action inconsistent with the traditions of a free, sovereign nation."

Protest Sent Germany.

The government announced tonight that its legation in Stockholm had been instructed to protest against the Germans' "brutal treatment" of Sirio Vacarezza, an Argentine citizen, and his family in Italy. The protest was lodged with Swedish authorities for delivery to Berlin.

Punishment of the persons responsible, an apology, and compensation were demanded.

Vacarezza, his wife, and two sons were accused of espionage and imprisoned on June 10, 1944, in Santa Maria del Tara, Parma province, where the family had been living temporarily, the foreign ministry communique said.

Escape to Switzerland.

The arrest was made, the statement said, by German soldiers. The family later was released and appealed to Italian authorities, who saved Vacarezza from being executed as a spy. The family eventually escaped to Bern, Switzerland.

"These facts," the note said, "speak for themselves and they are in addition to previous acts perpetrated by armed forces of the reich against Argentine citizens and property."

SENATORS SEEK ACTION ON STATE BONUS POLICIES

Seek Way for Decision at Present Session.

BY ROBERT HOWARD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., March 26.—Senators Peters [R., St. Joseph] and Dick [R., Quincy] today supported a move to establish at once a special commission to recommend World War II. soldiers' bonus policies before the legislature adjourns.

Such a bill was introduced last week in the house by Rep. Burt [R., Freeport] and 12 other representatives and is awaiting a hearing before the house judiciary committee.

Peters and Dick asked that the house bill be dropped and said they would sponsor an identical measure which could be enacted a week earlier by an agreement not to send it to committees. By such a procedure, they said, the legislative commission, which would consist of five members of each house, the budgetary commission chairman, and five members appointed by the governor, could attend a meeting in Chicago April 14 to discuss the bonus question with the American Legion's legislative committee.

Green Leaders Worried.

"Such a commission could confer with veterans' organizations and talk with discharged and furloughed service men," said Peters, who is senate chairman on aeronautics and military affairs. "The bill will require a report to the assembly by June 1, which is 30 days before the deadline for adjournment."

Gov. Green's legislative leaders were worried lest a bonus drive upset budgetary plans for the coming biennium. The governor's record budget, totaling more than 600 million dollars, will be presented Wednesday. Administration leaders last week declined to support a bill by Sen. Baker [R., Davis Junction] to set aside 25 per cent of the sales tax for a future bonus.

Estimates are that 400 million dollars might be needed to pay a bonus to the Illinois men and women, 800,000 or more of whom are now in uniform. After World War I. the state financed a bonus with a 55 million dollar bond issue, the last of which was retired last year. Interest payments raised the total cost to more than 85 millions. With a differential for overseas service the World War I. bonus provided for a maximum of $300 for each veteran.

Green Would Wait.

Gov. Green, who has created a special office in each county to help service men make the readjustment to civilian life, has indicated his belief that specific bonus policies can't be intelligently formulated during the war, since it is impossible to estimate how many men will be in uniform for how long a period.

Caution about the proposed $9,400,000 biennial increase in state school distributive aid, which will have a house hearing tomorrow, was proposed by Thomas E. Fiske, executive secretary of the nonpartisan Taxpayers Federation of Illinois.

"The large increases now proposed might place the state government in a position after the war where it could not continue such grants without seeking additional revenue," he said in a statement.

Hunt for Missing G. O. P. Publicity Man Given Up

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—Police said today they had halted a search for Leland L. Chesley, acting Republican national committee publicity director, because he had been reported in New York last week. The search was started March 10 after Chesley disappeared. Republican headquarters said they had had no direct word from him since March 10.

THE QUESTION.

What breach of good manners in a theater irks you?

WHERE ASKED.

Chicago Public library.

THE ANSWERS.

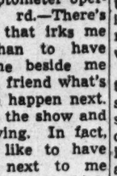
Mrs. C. F. McBride, housewife, 9056 Dauphin av.—Trying to find your way around in a darkened theater isn't easy. When you finally spot a seat and try to get to it, there are always people who won't budge from their seats. Then when you step on their feet accidentally [tho you want to do it on purpose], they grumble or swear.

Ruth Oswald, student, 6542 S. Hoyne av.—Children who are old enough to be a little bit refined take advantage of a darkened theater. It's a perfect place for cutting up and playing cowboys and Indians up and down the aisles. Not long ago I set a box of popcorn on the seat beside me and a boy came over and took a handful.

Kathleen Kull, comptometer operator, 4340 Sheridan rd.—There's nothing that irks me more than to have some one beside me telling a friend what's going to happen next. It spoils the show and is annoying. In fact, I don't like to have persons next to me talk about anything and I don't think it's good manners.

Norma Cooper, student, 5452 S. Winchester av.—People who open up cellophane bags and wad paper and candy wrappers in the theater ought to be confined to a certain section of the theater. Then with every one else around them doing the same thing, they'd get a taste of how distracting it is and learn better manners.

Sara Gittleman, student, 1546 Jonquil terr.—I don't think any one should take his shoes off in a theater and then go crawling around under the seats, grabbing ankles and generally getting in the way trying to locate the shoes when he wants to put them back on. Even if a person doesn't lose his shoes he shouldn't take them off.



Shirley Sheldon, inspector, 2745 N. Parkside av.—Holding hands is perfectly all right but I don't believe in necking in a movie. In the first place it isn't proper and in the second place when two people have their heads together it obstructs the view of the person sitting behind them and ruins the show for him.

17th District Democrats Name No Bench Slate

The 17th district Democratic judicial convention at Woodstock, McHenry county, adjourned last night without nominating any candidates for the June 4 election. Action of the convention, of which Joseph A. Jadrick of Waukegan was chairman, leaves unopposed the Republican candidates for Circuit court judges in the district. They are Ralph J. Dady of Waukegan, William R. Dusher of Rockford, and William M. Carroll, state's attorney of McHenry county.

15 WEEK COURSE FOR INFANTRY IS RATED ADEQUATE

BY JOSEPH HEARST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Camp Wheeler, Ga., March 26.—The infantryman, who has to learn how to use more weapons than any other fighting man, is getting his training in 15 weeks now and then going overseas as a replacement for a battle casualty.

From the day a man's local draft board inducts him until he reaches a port of embarkation not more than 18 weeks will elapse if he goes to an infantry camp, which he probably will, for today the emphasis is on the doughboy. There are 20 replacement training centers operated by the army ground forces. Fifteen of them train infantrymen.

Glamor Elsewhere.

Maj. Gen. Harry F. Hazlett, commanding general of the replacement and school command, says the infantryman has not been so highly publicized because of "glamor placed elsewhere." He says no one is of more value to the nation than the infantryman, the fellow "who supported by thousands of other men on the ground and in the air, will capture the last enemy strong hold."

Gen. Hazlett and Maj. Gen. T. G. Hearn, formerly chief of staff to Gen. Stilwell in the China-Burma-India theater and now commanding general at Camp Wheeler, told reporters today that altho infantry training now has been telescoped into 15 weeks, it is adequate. A few months ago trainees received 17 weeks of instruction.

"In this period of intensified training we can get the job done so thoroly that if the men, when sent overseas, are put into the type of unit for which they were trained, in numbers that can reasonably be absorbed, they will be ready to go," Gen. Hazlett said.

Fire More Practice Rounds.

"Training depends on how much time you have to get ready. If the Japs had invaded our west coast we would have fought with untrained men. Today we have to keep the pipeline to the combat areas filled with replacements. We are doing it with men who are better trained than in the past.

"They fire more practice rounds with live ammunition than formerly, handle more live grenades, fire oftener with the bazooka. A veteran outfit going into combat with a certain percentage of replacements is better qualified for battle than a unit with many months of training going into battle for the first time."

In illustrating the improvements in training Gen. Hazlett said that formerly there were not enough Garand rifles to go around. The men trained with Enfield rifles and finished off by firing a few rounds with the Garand—the rifle they would use in combat.

"Today every rifleman fires 447 rounds with the Garand," he said. "That includes his early training against stationary targets at specified range, later at moving targets, at targets at unspecified range where he must figure the distance himself, in close combat work with his other squadmen, and in village fighting, where he is shown how to fight from house to house with grenades and rifles and machine gun support.

"In addition he fires 148 rounds with the Browning automatic rifle and 584 rounds with the light machine gun if he is assigned to a light weapons unit. If he is in a heavy weapons unit he fires 816 rounds with the heavy water cooled machine gun. He also is taught how to use the bazooka, firing live ammunition at tanks. He spends many hours learning how to use hand grenades. The men in the cannon and anti-tank and mortar companies also fire many rounds with the Garand rifle. It all adds up to more training than in earlier phases of the war."

Gen. Hazlett said the best answer to criticism of the training system is that not one complaint has been received from field commanders about the qualities of the replacements in months, while veterans are complaining that the replacements are getting promotions over old timers.

Infantry training starts with the usual basic six weeks work during which the men are taught drill, the manual of arms, given courses in hygiene and orientation and map reading, taught how to use a compass, and given preliminary work in the use of the rifle and the grenade. Then they are drilled in the specialized work for which they have been selected, ending with a three week bivouac in the open.

Under Artillery Fire.

In this three weeks they have night problems, sleep in the open under pup tents in all weather, move forward under live artillery fire, and engage in village fighting. In the latter phase the men work forward thru more than a score of buildings, using grenades, rifle fire and bayonets to kill the theoretical enemy. Men who on induction day couldn't have chinned themselves climb ropes hand over hand to second floor windows.

Gen. Hazlett told reporters that one of the toughest jobs in every camp is what he termed the "spiritual" training of the men.

"Too many men have the attitude of 'let George do it,'" he said. "I believe the attitude is due to home training, to the lack of discipline in the home and the school in recent years. There was a time when every child had chores to do, but today how many have anything to do? They do as they please at home and at school. They get a lot of ideas about their rights and privileges, but few, if any, about their duties and responsibilities."

11 STATES ACT TO GIVE YANKS VOICE IN PEACE

The legislatures of 11 states have adopted or are considering resolutions urging congress to give our absent soldiers and sailors a voice in shaping a world organization designed to preserve peace, a summary prepared yesterday disclosed.

The movement for G. I. representation in the making of the peace was given impetus by Gov. Green recently when he issued a reminder of the Republican party's commitment to that effect in the platform adopted at the national convention in Chicago last summer.

Six States Complete Action.

Six of the 11 states already have completed action on resolutions by voting unanimous approval. These states are Connecticut, Idaho, Iowa, Maryland, and North and South Carolina. Resolutions are awaiting action in Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Rhode Island.

Altho similar in the central idea, the resolutions vary in the extent of their recommendations. Some present detailed plans to effect G. I. representation at the peace table, while others leave the details to congress. Maryland's resolution, typical of the others in its spirit, says, "It seems only fitting that those who have fought our battles should participate in the making of our peace."

The Connecticut legislature approved a memorial urging congress to make certain that delegates who have served in the army, navy, marines, and merchant marine in this war are among United States representatives at the peace table.

Voice in Armed Forces Urged.

The Idaho legislature urged that "in the discussion of the post-war military policy and the form of the military establishment, the fullest opportunity consistent with existing conditions be accorded the officers and men of all components of the army who are or who have been serving with the armed forces in time of war to express their views . . ."

Maryland proposed that one representative from the army, one from the navy, and one from the air forces "be selected by our government to participate in deliberations for constructing a permanent peace in the world." Both Iowa and North Carolina specified that foreign service should be a required qualification for the veterans' spokesmen. South Carolina suggested that an enlisted man be designated.

F. D. R. ASKS U. S. HELP LIFT WORLD FOOD STANDARDS

Calls for Congress O. K. on New Organization.

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—President Roosevelt recommended to congress today that it approve the constitution of an allied nations food and agriculture organization and authorize active American participation.

The President said the agency proposed to "maintain and expand prosperity for agriculture in all countries." He asserted he was not urging a "relief organization."

In a message to the legislators, the President said:

"Improved standards of nutrition, increased levels of farm incomes, avoidance of agricultural surpluses—these are among the important objectives that the food and agricultural organization will assist the nations of the world in achieving."

The proposed agency grew out of an international food conference at Hot Springs, Va., nearly two years ago. It was formulated by an interim commission.

"No Alien Controls."

The President sent congress the first report of this commission together with the projected constitution of the food organization.

Commenting on the work of this group, he said:

"The interim commission has done its work well. It has prepared a plan for a permanent international organization thru which governments can pool and extend their knowledge and collaborate with each other in raising the standards of nutrition of their peoples and in establishing and maintaining an expanding prosperity for agriculture in all countries."

If this country joins the organization, Mr. Roosevelt said, "we will retain complete freedom of action in determining our national agriculture policies." The constitution, he added, gives the organization "no powers of direction or control over any nation."

American responsibilities, he said, would be of the same nature as those congress already has authorized in approving participation in the Pan American Union.

A Weapon Against War.

"The united nations," Mr. Roosevelt asserted, "have already made much progress in setting up an organization for international security.

"But our collaboration for peace must be on a broader basis than security alone. We must strive to correct the conditions that predispose people toward war or make them the ready tools and victims of aggressors.

"We shall need also to work together as nations toward achieving freedom from want. Our participation in the food and agriculture organization will be an essential step in this collaboration."

The constitution of the food organization provides that it shall include fisheries and forests within the scope of its work, and that in agriculture it shall cover both food and nonfood products, the President said. The work of the food and agriculture organization will be primarily technical and advisory.

Its staff will be small, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, and its budget will be $2,500,000 for the first year—with $625,000 as the share to be borne by the United States—and about twice that amount in succeeding years.

43 FOOD STORES ADMIT GUILT IN DICKER WITH OPA

Forty-three Chicago area grocers and butchers paid nominal damages under consent judgments and are operating under permanent Circuit court injunctions after admitting over-ceiling sales to consumers, Marion W. Isbell, area office of price administration director, said yesterday.

ORDER TAX UNITS TO CLAMP DOWN ON SNEAK CAFES

U. S. Agents to Hunt Curfew Dodgers.

Treasury department agents of both internal revenue and alcohol tax units here were ordered yesterday to clamp down on "sneak" cafe, night club, and tavern operators who are evading the midnight curfew and on black market operators who have resorted to tax evasion to cover profits from their activities.

Several hundred agents in Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin were sent into action by the federal move to put teeth into war regulations. E. C. Yellowley, head of the alcohol tax units for the three states, said operators caught sending patrons to speakeasies operating after midnight will be prosecuted on criminal charges.

Use License as Lever.

Prosecutions, Yellowley said, will be based on failure to purchase federal retail liquor licenses, which cost only $27.50 but which, if purchased, are a matter of public record for enforcement authorities to use in finding violators.

Such disclosure would give the city an opportunity to lay claim to the $880 city license fee for all liquor dispensers.

Alcohol tax agents will apply the further strict penalty of seizing the stocks of liquor found in places operating illegally, Yellowley said.

Will See Morgenthau.

In connection with drives against both income tax and license evaders, a meeting with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has been set for March 28, Yellowley said. Officials from Chicago attending will be Yellowley, Nigel D. Campbell, collector of internal revenue for the northern Illinois district; E. C. Wright, agent in charge of internal revenue agents, and A. P. Madden, head of internal revenue intelligence units.

Yellowley said he had been submitting evidence of income tax violations to Madden, who has checked tax returns.

On another front curfew violators faced a threat of war production board denial of light, power or fuel.

Will Invoke Penalties.

WPB disclosed in Washington that it will invoke such penalties after the WMC certifies to it that an employment ceiling has been violated.

The first step in enforcement, WPB said, is the imposition of a low man power ceiling by WMC on the offending night club or other amusement—or a zero ceiling which would put the place out of business by forbidding any employment of workers. If the ceilings were ignored, WMC would notify WPB, which would investigate and, after a hearing, apply penalties.

5 RED STAMPS VALID; NO MEAT PROMISE GIVEN

The office of price administration yesterday validated five new red food stamps, effective next Sunday, but would make no promise there would be any more meat available to make them good. Marion W. Isbell, area director, said he hoped the situation would become better within two months.

The new red stamps, in ration book 4, are K-2, L-2, M-2, N-2, and P-2, and they will be good until July 31. Five new blue stamps, T-2, U-2, V-2, W-2, and X-2, also will become good Sunday for the same period.

Sugar stamp 35 is the only valid one in the book, and will be good thru June 2. Another will be put into use May 1.

Chicago's quota of new passenger car tires, all of which will go to B and C card holders, has been slashed 34 per cent for April, Marion W. Isbell, area director of the OPA, said. Only 19,208, compared with 29,182 allowed for March, will be alloted in April, he said. Truck drivers, however, will fare better next month than this, as will tractor operators. There will be 6,715 truck tires available in all sizes compared with 5,111 this month, with tractor casings going up to 244 from 183.

THE Wheaton farm has not yet gotten its spring chicks, altho the nation is frantically trying to get chickens to eat and the government is urging increased production of them. The reason for the lack of chicks on the Wheaton farm is that no farm help has been available. The poultry lots were without a special man for many months.

A worker finally has been found to care for all the chickens, ducks, and turkeys and the spring chicks have been ordered. By this time the farm usually has chicks five weeks old. Part of this lost time will be made up, however, as the manager has secured some two week old chicks. Still time has been wasted and the production of meat and eggs has been delayed because farm labor has been drained from the countryside by the draft and the lure of high industrial wages.

Dogs Kill Five Sheep.

As a climax to the loss of potential meat at the farm, dogs raided the sheep flocks and killed two Karakul ewes, two Southdown ewes, and a wether. The crime was done by two dogs, one of which was a Great Dane. They chased the flocks around the pasture ripping and tearing the frightened ewes savagely.

A neighbor saw the dogs leap the fence into the sheep pasture and begin to worry the flocks. The man ran to the pasture to drive them off but when he saw the size of the Great Dane he returned to his house and got a club. With its aid he beat the animals away from the body of one ewe and chased them down the road. He then notified the farm men who tried unsuccessfully to save one badly torn ewe.

Men on Warpath.

The men are on the warpath now and the dogs will be shot on sight. Dogs should not be allowed to roam the countryside for they inevitably cause damage. The farm has lost sheep previously and last year almost lost a beef calf to preying dogs. It is a farm rule that trespassing dogs are targets for the worker who gets a gun first. The rule will continue in effect.

Because the farm can devote only a small acreage to corn this year the silos will be filled with alfalfa. This has been a common practice in the past and good results have been obtained. Grass silage has between 80 and 90 per cent of the feeding value of corn silage and offers quite a few advantages over ensiling corn. For one thing, it insures saving the entire first cutting of hay which usually is taken when early summer rains are liable to fall at any time.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

NINE flats of vegetable seedlings are under cultivation in the farm greenhouse. Crimson Cushion and John Baer tomato plants are three inches high; Fordhook hybrid tomatoes have grown two inches; Giant Crimson peppers are about an inch high, and Black Beauty eggplants the same size.

The other four flats contain members of the onion family which later will be transplanted to the farm gardens. Utah Sweet Valencia and Valencia White onions have grown four inches; the elephant variety of leek is about three inches high, and a small flat of chive seedlings have grown a little more than an inch.

The men have planted a 500 foot row of Yellow Globe and White Portugal onion sets in the garden, and will soon plant a 250 foot row of union seeds. Seed varieties to be planted include Southport Yellow Globe, Yellow Globe Danvers, and Golden Globe.

ARMY'S CHARGES IN MEAT FAMINE STUDIED BY OPA

Examine Records of Packing Firms.

In its effort to stamp out the black market in meat, the office of price administration yesterday started examining invoices and other records in packing firms named in army complaints as not supplying the full 60 per cent "set aside" of AA, A, and B grades of meat to which the army is entitled, Homer Clay, chief OPA enforcement attorney, said.

Slaughterhouses Target.

At the same time another squad of 30 agents started a study of country slaughterers in the Chicago area to determine whether they are collecting red points, observing ceiling prices, and complying with regulations.

Clay pointed out that the drive is not against farm slaughter but against country slaughter houses, which are for the most part not under federal supervision. In the few firms that are federally inspected, Clay said, the rule to set aside meat for the army will be enforced.

By-Passing Held Cause.

The National Association of Retail Meal Dealers has blamed by-passing of federally inspected slaughterhouses for a large part of the shortage now being felt by housewives. Large packing houses are unable, under OPA regulations, to pay as much as the country slaughterers, the dealers charged.

Clay said investigation of slaughtering on farms will come next in the OPA program. He said much of the farm slaughter finds its way into frozen food lockers, which are said to have contributed materially to the shortage in stores. Such slaughter and sale, Clay said, is theoretically subject to regulation, but enforcement has been difficult.

REPORTS PURSE SNATCHING.

Sally Michniewicz, 17, a Harrison High school student, who lives at 1843 S. California av., reported to police yesterday that three boys of high school age snatched her purse, containing a $25 pen and pencil set and some money, in front of 2040 Cermak rd.

ARMY OUTDOES BYRNES ON N. Y. EATING CURFEW

New York, March 26 [Special].—The second service command announced officially today that all restaurants serving liquor are within the purview of the military midnight curfew, even tho they close their bars at midnight. The announcement, which goes the Byrnes office and the war man power commission one better, was made after a meeting on Governor's Island attended by army and navy officials.

The meeting was an outgrowth of Sunday morning confusion in downtown Manhattan when military police ejected service men from such all night restaurants as Childs 42d st., Reuben's, and Toffenetti's. Service men who have ordered a meal before midnight, however, will hereafter be given a reasonable time in which to finish it, the army said.

Several restaurant associations scheduled meetings tomorrow to consider proposals to close down liquor serving restaurants at midnight, the general attitude being, "If we can't serve service men, why serve civilians?" Military police complained they've got "the dirtiest job in the army," and would rather be at the front than tossing their buddies out of restaurants."

Lt. Stebbins attended Hyde Park High school and the University of Illinois. The family lives at 6835 Harper av.

TOLEDO CURFEW DEFIER AWAITS WMC JOB TEST

Movie Will Go On Pending Ruling.

Toledo, O., March 26 [Special].—Jack O'Connell, owner of the Loop movie theater which has defied the midnight curfew for the last week by staying open until 5 a. m., said today after receiving news of the war production board's sanction procedure for curfew violators that "the Loop will be open tonight as usual."

The WPB announced in Washington, D. C., that it would invoke priority penalties against curfew violators only when the war man power commission has certified that an employment ceiling has been violated. The WPB said that a curfew violation in itself will not bring WPB punitive action thru the halting of light, power, or fuel or the suspension of priority privileges.

He's Sticking to His Guns.

"I'm sticking to my guns," O'Connell asserted. "At least the WPB has clarified what a sanction is and how it is to be invoked."

Ralph O. Snyder, area director for the war man power commission, said he will act within a day or so to establish an employment ceiling for O'Connell's theater. He said this ceiling will be so low that O'Connell will not be able to operate without violating it.

Last week Snyder certified the theater to the national WMC as a curfew violator and said he expected the WPB would respond by banning the use of electricity by the theater.

Seven Employed in Theater.

The theater employs seven persons, O'Connell said. Two are union operators. The others, in addition to O'Connell and his wife, are a legless man who takes tickets and uses a wheeled platform as a means of locomotion; a man of 72 with a broken leg; and a woman of 50 ineligible for work in a war plant because of a goiter.

O'Connell said he interpreted the WPB announcement to mean that if his employes continue to work in defiance of a WMC ceiling a hearing would be held before the WPB compliance division, at which the government would be required to prove that the violation had resulted in the use of materials needed elsewhere for the war effort. He indicated he would welcome such a hearing.

Coalition between the two major parties for the Cook county judicial election June 4 was completed yesterday with the filing in the secretary of state's office of notices of withdrawal from the Republican slate. Both party conventions named the same candidates, 10 sitting Democrats and eight sitting Republicans in Circuit court and three Democrats and two Republicans for vacancies. Filing the withdrawals eliminates the Republican ticket and leaves only the coalition slate, bearing the Democratic label.

Springfield, Ill., March 26 [Special].—Rep. Randolph said that of the 87 circuit and superior judges in Cook county, 11 are more than 70 years old and nine are between 65 and 70. Most of them are running for reelection this year.

WORLD AIR LINE BRANDED THREAT TO U. S. SERVICES

Senators Warned Against Foreign Domination.

Washington, March 26 (AP).—International "freedom of the air" today was opposed before a senate commerce subcommittee by Martin H. Miller, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, as a "starry eyed" ideal which would threaten American living standards.

Miller appeared at a hearing on a bill by Sen. McCarran [D., Nev.] to establish a single American air line for international traffic to be known as American Flag Line, Inc. He indorsed the bill, but urged that all transportation interests be permitted to participate. The bill restricts participation to air lines.

Miller said the state department, "in some manner which is difficult for an ordinary citizen to understand," proposes to adopt "as official policy, a certain list of so-called freedoms of the air."

Finds U. S. Chances Weakened.

"These freedoms," Miller said, "would permit the air lines of countless foreign nations to operate to the United States and thru its territory all the air line services they may see fit to establish.

"Such policies seriously weaken America's chance of retaining its proper share of the world's air traffic which it originates.

"They would bring into the domestic field the all-out competition of foreign air lines whose standards of business ethics, whose wage levels, whose principles of public welfare would inevitably have an undermining effect on the high principles which have become accepted as the shield of our republic."

AFL Aid Backs Bill.

A statement by H. W. Brown, president of the AFL International Association of Machinists, was read to the senators by W. G. Flinn, international representative. It also indorsed the McCarran proposal.

Brown also went on record before a senate foreign relations subcommittee before which is pending the proposed international air convention and the so-called five "freedoms of the air."

The convention and the freedoms are contained in agreements drawn up at last year's Chicago air conference for submission to 52 governments represented at the meeting.

Brown contended the "five freedoms" embraced in agreements three and four "are contrary to the interests of American labor."

Wage Standards Cited.

"The United States should not acquiesce in any new international policy of 'freedom of the air' which would work only for the benefit of foreign nations with lower wage standards than ours," his statement said.

Alexander F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said acceptance of the five freedoms "would cause irreparable damage to American workers and the American transport industry."

He said his organization "seriously questioned the validity of binding" the government to the Chicago agreements by "executive authority alone."

"Our legal counsel has advised us "that only thru senate action could our government be found under them," he said.

COUNTY PUTTING 25,000 SAPLINGS OUT IN PRESERVE

Gardeners Told Soil Is in Good Condition.

Yesterday marked the start of spring tree planting time in the Cook county forest preserves, with the first of 25,000 saplings going into the ground in the Camp Bemis area near Western Springs. Noel Wysong, chief forester, said the unusually warm spring has left the topsoil in excellent condition for transplanting, and recommended that homeowners get their trees and shrubs into the ground as soon as possible.

R. C. Schmidt of the Chicago weather bureau, said gardeners and tree planters will have no need to worry about weather interruptions for the next few days. Chicago thermometers are expected to register up to 75 degrees this afternoon and no rain is in sight.

New Record in Sight.

O. T. Lay, in charge of the Chicago weather bureau, looked into his files yesterday and announced that a new record will be listed for 1945 if the spring weather remains mild and we have no more killing frosts. The last killing frost this year was recorded March 8, the earliest final killing frost in the 74 year history of the bureau. The latest killing frost of record was on May 25, 1882, and until this year the earliest final frost was on March 20, 1925. The average date of final killing frost in the Chicago area is April 15.

Wysong pointed out that the tree planting program in the forest preserves is necessitated by annual fire damage.

Warns of Fire Hazard.

"If Chicagoland residents were more careful in their use of the preserves," he said, "we never would have to replant. Last season there were 276 fires started by picknickers, hikers, trail riders, and automobile travelers. These fires burned 952 acres of the 36,000 acres in the forest preserves."

He said his men will plant about 25,000 trees this spring and about the same number next fall. Half of these will be white oaks and burr oaks, the rest mainly American elms, slippery elms, sugar maples, silver maples, black walnuts, and white ash. Many shrubs, such as red dogwood and honeysuckle, also will be planted in the preserves this spring.

REVERSE DENIAL OF ANNEXATION BID IN WAUKEGAN

Circuit Court Judge William L. Pierce of Belvidere, Boone county, yesterday reversed an order entered by County Judge Perry L. Persons of Waukegan Aug. 21, 1942, denying a petition for annexation by the city of Waukegan of a 600 acre tract of land northeast of the Lake county city.

Judge Pierce's ruling was received by Circuit Court Clerk L. J. Wilmot, who was instructed to turn it over to the city clerk of Waukegan for action by the city council.

The petition had been signed by holders of lots in the tract, which had been deeded them by Jack E. Bairstow, city attorney of Waukegan, acting as a private individual, and Atty. Lester Collins. A condition of the free deed was the recipient's signature of the annexation petition. The fight against the petition was led by the Johns-Manville corporation, which occupies and owns approximately 280 acres of the tract.

Judge Pierce's order held that all statutory requirements to make the annexation petition legal had been fulfilled and that the county court had erred in dismissing it. The case had been appealed to Judge Pierce, sitting in Lake County Circuit court.

PULLMAN SPACE CUT ONE-HALF, SENATORS LEARN

At least 50 per cent of the Pullman space on trains is "frozen" because of various allocations before the public gets a chance to buy tickets, members of a state senate committee investigating the travel black market were told yesterday by railway officials.

Under the questioning of Sen. Libonati [D., Chicago], chairman of the committee, and prodding by Sen. Knox [R., Chicago], the manager of passenger traffic for the New York Central railroad, J. W. Switzer, admitted that he did not know how it was possible for publicly available reservations to be sold out 10 minutes after they are placed on sale for use a month later. He told the committee it was a physical impossibility for his staff of ticket sellers to do such a thing, but did not deny that it was done.

Explaining the system of allocations, Switzer told the senators space is "frozen" for the government reservation bureau which handles military needs, for wounded men at the request of the army surgeon general, and space is assigned to other cities and also put aside for large firms and industries.

Switzer became a little confused in his testimony when he first told the committee that he did not know that space is set aside regularly on some trains for manufacturing concerns. Later he admitted that companies employed in war work which had men traveling regularly were consigned reservations every day for their use, but said he considered this space as being available to everybody.

Edward P. Burke, passenger traffic manager for the Pullman company, said that many times passengers themselves encourage the black market in reservations by turning them over to hotel porters and other men to change or cancel. The porters then may peddle the reservation which should be canceled at a railroad ticket office, he said.

Deny Workers Are Involved.

Burke denied that any railroad men are involved in black market transactions and asserted, as had Switzer previously, that he had heard only rumors of illegal transactions and has not been able to trace down anything of importance.

Burke said it might be possible for the reservations on a train to be sold out 10 minutes after being offered because every one now grabs what he can get and then makes plans to travel. This results in many late cancelations, he said.

After hearing Burke, the committee adjourned until next Monday.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

FOUNDED JUNE 10, 1847

COMRADE BROWDER REPORTS.

When Dr. Wirt went to Washington in the first flush of the New Deal and the fellow travelers told him that Mr. Roosevelt was their Kerensky, whom they had involved in a swiftly moving stream from which he could never escape, THE TRIBUNE credited his report as that of an honest and intelligent man. We looked about and found other evidence that Mr. Roosevelt was working with the Communists, he using them and they using him.

We printed that evidence and have continued to print the voluminous accretions to it ever since. No other stigma has so exasperated the New Dealers and none has drawn from them a greater volume of vituperation and untruth in the effort to evade it. The charge hurt because it was true and it could not be denied successfully. The Communists never sought to deny it. The denials came from Mr. Roosevelt and his following. He made them himself, repeatedly and unconvincingly, and his subsidized newspapers denied and ranted interminably.

They denounced as reactionaries all those who could see no important difference between Stalin's slavery and Hitler's slavery. After the United States entered openly into the war which Stalin had given Hitler the signal to start the New Dealers attempted to smear as unpatriotic any one who saw what Stalin and his agents in this country were doing and told what he saw.

The Communists have been more frank. During the period from September, 1939, until June, 1941, when Mr. Roosevelt had abandoned the Russian interest for his British interest, and as a sign of his displeasure packed Mr. Browder off temporarily to prison, Browder took the platform in New York and bitterly and factually disclosed the aid and advice the Communists had given the New Dealers. He taunted the Rooseveltians with the charge that they had been so anxious to overthrow society that at times the Communists, for tactical reasons, had to pull them back.

Mr. Browder, out of prison and back in the good graces of the administration, has just issued another report to his party, which a year ago went underground as a "political association." He gloated over the fact that the Communists are breaking down the barriers erected against them in this country, citing in this connection the commissioning of Communists as officers in the army by President Roosevelt. And he boasted that "our own policies and work contributed essentially to the victory of Nov. 7," and that Communist political influence within labor and what he called "progressive" organizations has grown "far wider and deeper than it ever was before."

If any further proof of the matter were needed, Browder's report definitely establishes the truth that the Communists are working for Roosevelt and he is working for them. THE TRIBUNE'S charges, attacked so long and so unsuccessfully, are vindicated and Mr. Roosevelt and his stooges have the choice of retiring in confusion or of admitting the truth and trying to brazen it out.

We now tell our readers that San Francisco is an organized campaign to make the world safe for communism, under the pretense of guaranteeing peace. Stalin at Yalta made certain that any organization set up at San Francisco will be powerless to question his aggressions already accomplished or to prevent any that he may contemplate. Poland and the Baltic nations which he swallowed will not be represented at San Francisco. Turkey got a seat there, but the Yalta deal guarantees that if Stalin wants to grab the Dardanelles the proposed world organization can investigate but can take no action to which Russia does not agree. Surely the American people won't be hoodwinked this time.

THE TRUTH ABOUT RUSSIA.

The Moscow magazine, War and the Working Class, which has become the organ of international communism, has exhorted the newspapers in America to "give true and complete information about our country." It charged that part of the American press has falsified reports about Russia.

The quick retort is available that what displeases the communist organ is not too little truth about Russia but too much. The charge, however, may be examined on its merits. War and the Working Class cites a recent article by Prof. Warren B. Walsh of Syracuse university which said that public opinion polls indicate that only one American in 10 is even reasonably well informed about the soviet union. "The soviet people," the magazine says, "are surprised at many fantastic statements of soviet life and ways appearing in the foreign press."

Grant for a moment that these charges are true. Whose fault is it? Where are Americans to get accurate information about conditions in Russia?

War and the Working Classes would be satisfied, no doubt, if America turned out to attend the lectures and read the books of Comrade Browder and the other American Communists which extol life under the soviets, but the American people would not be satisfied. Americans may be insufficiently informed about Russia and Russian Communists, but they know American Communists, and the first thing they know about them is that their word is not to be believed.

The American public has at its service the most comprehensive, the most intelligent, and on the whole the fairest and most objective organization for gathering information that has ever served any nation. That organization is the combined news gathering facilities of American press associations, newspapers, and magazines. The American people have confidence in it and believe its reports. They would believe what it reported about Russia, checking one account against another, and sifting the truth from misapprehension or falsehood. But they don't get those reports. They don't get them because Russia maintains the most rigorous censorship in the world.

American reporters, it is true, are stationed in Moscow. They are allowed to transmit exactly what the Russian government wishes them to, and nothing more. Reporters cannot send to this country anything that has not been printed in the Russian press, which is rigorously controled by the government. Except on rare occasions, they have not been permitted to travel with Russian armies. They are not permitted to travel around Russia—among the civilian population, except under escort, and civilians are discouraged from talking to them except in the presence of the escorts provided by the Russian government. When American and British correspondents have attempted to go into the countries "liberated" by the Red army, they have either been refused admission or been subjected to such censorship that they abandoned their missions in disgust.

That is why Americans don't know more about Russia. Under the circumstances, can War and the Working Classes blame them for suspecting the communist government of exercising its rigid censorship because it is afraid of the truth?

SERMONS TO GRADUATES.

At the University of Chicago's 220th convocation the graduates heard an old fashioned address, or, more accurately, the kind of address that is becoming old fashioned in these days of Mr. Roosevelt, Henry Wallace, Dr. Alvin Hansen, and other exponents of planned abundance with security.

The speaker, Mr. Laird Bell, vice chairman of the board of trustees, admonished the young men and women to go forth not in search of security but looking for high adventure. Mr. Bell spoke of the astonishing progress of civilization in this country, achieved by the energies and ambitions of millions of men competing with one another. "They had no security," he said. "Nobody planned for them, nobody convinced them that our world had matured and wasn't going to grow any more. I find it hard to believe that this is all over in a sudden now. I find it still harder to be reconciled to the thought that the young should turn away from an exciting world of risk and big stakes for a tame one planned, however expertly, by some one else."

The commencement period thruout the land will be with us again soon, and forward looking institutions are undoubtedly shopping around already for appropriate speakers. A few deserving Washington burocrats will probably receive a call. We need not expect their addresses to follow the pattern of that of Mr. Bell. They are busy men and, in order to save them time and effort, we are offering them the rough draft of the kind of script they will wish to follow:

"Young men and women of the graduating class, Dr. Witherspoon, parents, and friends: Soon you will be the proud possessors of a social security number. Your old age will be provided for by the taxpayers. The more ambitious of you will shortly be paying union dues. You will have to go thru the motions of working until you are 65 and you are eligible for a federal pension. There will, of course, be exhilarating interruptions. You may show your employer who is boss by engaging in a slowdown now and then. If things get too dull, you can always go on strike. Perhaps some reactionary will object to your sleeping on the job. You may not be provided overstuffed chairs at your work bench. Or maybe the coat hangers won't be painted pink. If so, take your places on the picket line and uphold your social gains.

"If, by good fortune, you should become unemployed, you will receive unemployment compensation. Don't worry; you'll still manage to get enough for cigarets and beer. If idleness appeals to you, the sympathetic WPA will put you on relief. There's nothing to fear—not even fear itself. Of course, we prefer you to keep on the job, paying your union dues and making your contributions to the PAC. I need not say that we shall be grateful for your assistance.

"You can throw your textbooks away now and there is no further obligation to improve your minds. We in Washington will do your thinking. We will plan you right into the grave. You need have no initiative or ambition. You're socially secured for life. From now on, you're one of 60 million jobs. And now, let us face the future, stifling a yawn. Before we adjourn, please rise and recite in unison the economic bill of rights of our great commander in chief. We'll follow that with the New Deal hymn, 'We Planned It That Way.' After that, file by Dr. Witherspoon, who will hand out your diplomas. You'll find your social security number embossed upon them. Applications for CIO membership may be had as you pass out the door."

NATIONAL INCOME CONCEPT.

[New York Times.]

There has been considerable emphasis upon the volume of national income and the gross national product required in order to achieve post-war "full employment." Such estimates leave the impression that national income can be estimated with precision. This is far from the case. In the current issue of Monetary Notes, Prof. Walter E. Spahr of New York university raises a number of interesting questions concerning this concept.

Just what is "national income?" Is this concept measurable and is it measured statistically with any accuracy? Does a large "national income" cause spending, or is it the result of spending? What, specifically, is its relation to spending? And is it "national income" or spending that, along with the goods and services sold, determines prices? And where does greater production, saving, and investment fit into these factors as casual agents?

With our "national income" now said to be roughly twice that of the average year of the 1920s, are we twice as well off?

The emphasis on national income places the cart before the horse. The emphasis should be upon producing the goods and services which people will desire. If we have a balanced output of goods, we will have high level employment and a high national income. But the latter are the result, not the cause. We must focus our attention on the causes.

JULIUS AND THE ELKS.

The first general in history to lead an invading army across the Rhine was Julius Caesar, whose bridge building exploit has vexed many generations of students. He didn't stay over there very long because the country looked like a howling wilderness with no possibilities for loot, but he brought back some interesting observations. His story about the German elks, for example, ranks high among the classics of nature-faking and is good for a hearty laugh in any Latin class that gets to Book VI. of the "Gallic Wars."

"There are also animals called elks," wrote the mighty Julius. "They shed their horns and they have legs without any joints. They do not lie down in order to rest. They use trees as beds, leaning against them. Hunters cut away the roots of such trees or chop notches in them. When the elks lean against these trees, they break them down with their weight and collapse along with them." [A longer translation may be found in "Pause to Wonder," a new anthology of strange and mysterious tales.]

Having fallen, the stiff-legged elks could not rise, of course, and the hunters came along in the morning to pick them up by dozens. Into the bag they went because they went to sleep leaning against trees. And today the citizens of Germany, who leaned so trustfully against Hitler, are in much the same fix.

The habitat of the jointless elks, according to Caesar, was the Hercynian forest. His description indicates that the term covered all the mountains and forests of southern and central Germany. This ancient wilderness is recalled on modern maps by the Harz and Erz mountain ranges.

WHEN SPRING WAS BORN.

God made the earth and all the beasts thereon,
And then He went away awhile to rest.
When He returned He found the waiting fields
Were full of newborn young from plain to crest.
The baby animals wer everywhere;
They rolled, and romped, and tumbled, filled with glee,
And all the still-brown earth looked eagerly
To see what wonders God would now decree.
He watched the colts prance on their sticklike legs,
The kittens leaping with gay, elfin grace,
A gangling pup that slid on its small nose,
And deer that challenged the wild wind to race.
He knew the earth must match this ecstasy,
These young things fresh as was a dewy morn,
And when the tipsy lambs began to play,
He laughed out loud—and then the Spring was born.

So I gotta explain to her that those birds are doctors who knead your spine if ya ketch anything from a head cold to athletes foot. I think tha jerk we need is labeled a genealogist, or are they tha birds who live to be 80 yrs.? Course that's oke with me cause tha older he is tha more he ought to know.

There's so much talk now around tha shack about family-tree that our hound, Butch, puts on a disgusted look that reads to me like he's thinking, "what, no more privacy."

There's one insinuation, Mr. Linemaster, that I don't go for an that's where you infer that I'm a wine-guzzler. I give you my word I never have and never will touch a drop of that stuff in any form whatsoever. Of course, if tha ceiling on bourbon gets ooched any higher I may listen to reason. Also you ain't telling me anything new when you say that tha town has always had a population of 2,000 souls, never more or less, but you don't know tha answer to this strange puzzle and I do, so I will now be kind enough to enlighten you. Seems every time a new youngster arrives, tha town boasts of 2,001 pop. until towards evening, when it gets back again to 2,000. Duke Bakrak.

ROBIN REVEILLE.

When southern winds blow sunny-warm
To mark the end of snow and storm,
The robin finds a friendly tree
And calls in Spring, officially.
And as his joyous song unlocks
A new year's vernal equinox,
Zoo mothers bring their broods outside
To see the world and, goggle-eyed,
They stare as mamma tells them why
The visitors who wander by
Go two by two and hand in hand—
It's Spring, it's love, it's fairyland!

A service man may not be discharged to enter officer candidate training in another branch of service. However, he may be released to accept a direct commission.

K. F. E. writes: "Our son was released from the air forces last week. He said he didn't feel like going back to work right away, so left on a trip to Mexico. He said that his insurance was paid up, but he didn't say for how long. Can I send a check to the government to cover the premiums and, if I can, must it be for just a month or can I pay more?"

You may send a certified or cashier's check payable to the treasurer of the United States to the Veterans Administration in Washington, D. C., to cover any number of monthly premiums, and your payment will be credited to his account. Obviously quarterly, semi-annual, or annual payments save a great deal of time for the insured as well as for the veterans administration.

BLOODLESS FINGERS.

DURING the middle of the last century a French physician, Maurice Raynaud, described a peculiar phenomenon involving the circulation of the hands. Among his patients was a Madame X., who was an object of curiosity to her neighbors because of the effect of moderate cold on her fingers. Sudden cooling would cause her digits to become numb, icy, and whitish-yellow or gray in color. Relief was obtained by shaking them violently or soaking in warm water.

Exposure to cold is not the only factor which will give rise to these symptoms. They are common after an emotional upset or a period of excitement. These episodes throw the tiny capillaries into a state of spasm, leaving the fingers with a blanched appearance. When the narrowed blood channels relax, they do so with vengeance—by overdilating. The flesh becomes warm and begins to throb.

Healthy adults, if exposed to inclement weather for a long time may experience similar changes, but Raynaud sufferers exhibit these manifestations after mild chilling. How do these individuals differ from normal? Their capillaries are either oversensitive to cold; or the nervous system which controls the opening and closing of the blood vessels, is at fault.

Most victims encounter only minor discomfort. The condition may go on for years, never getting any worse—nor any better. Occasionally, only one finger is affected ["dead finger"]. But more severe forms may be noted. The nose, ears, chin, and cheeks may be involved. The skin becomes taut, shiny, and unwrinkled. The tips of the fingers taper and shrink, and the nails curve downward in a peculiar fashion.

Most patients find Madame X.'s treatment as satisfactory as any. Actually, coming into a warm room or massaging the hands gently is all that is necessary in most instances. The most important precaution is adequate protection with suitable clothing, including heavy gloves or muffs. Shoes large enough for one or even two pairs of woolen socks are advised. Remaining in a warm, dry climate during the winter months is ideal. Since tobacco causes a constriction of the vessels, smoking is definitely contraindicated.

Drugs do not cure the malady, but they may be valuable when distress is great. Mecholyl, the nitrites, papaverin, and prostigmin are most frequently employed. Cutting the offending sympathetic nerves is recommended in those who show evidence of rapid progression of the ailment.

The psychosomatic [bodily symptoms with mental origin] problem must be controled. There seems to be a relationship between the personality of the patient, his psychic disturbances, and physical symptoms. Relief of conflicts has resulted in the dramatic disappearance of suffering. Patients with this form of disease are treated with a combination of measures directed toward better mental hygiene, alleviation of social-economic derangements, and improvement of the circulation.

Know that current song hit, "One Meatball"? Perhaps you don't know that the original version, "One Fishball," was actually written 90 years ago in Boston. It was written by George Martin Lane, professor of Latin at Harvard, in 1855 and was based upon his own humiliation when he was told, after ordering one fishball, "We don't give bread with one fishball." The Harvard students picked up the pathetic ditty and made it so popular that during the Civil war Professor Francis J. Child translated it into Italian. With James Russell Lowell he then wrote a one act opera, "Il Pesceballo." Charles Eliot Norton wrote the introduction, and it was produced at Harvard in 1862 as a soldier benefit. Tin Pan Alley please copy.

And remember that mournful hillbilly ballad, "If I Had the Wings of an Angel"? On reading an essay by J. B. S. Haldane, the British scientist, we learned that any one who actually wore the wings of an angel for locomotive purposes would be a woeful object. A man-size angel whose muscles had no more power, weight for weight, than those of an eagle or pigeon would require a breast projected out four feet to house the muscles, while his legs would have to be reduced to stilts to economize in weight. Makes angelic life unpleasant, doesn't it?

A classified ad in the March 22 issue of the Evening Post in Wellington, New Zealand, carried the title, "Love Is Mounted on Wheels." The ad:

"Automobile owner would like to correspond with widow owning two tires [5.25 by 20]. Object matrimony. Send pictures of tires."

A recent column here quoted a Red Cross director in Greenland as saying: "Was Eric the Red color blind when he named this place?" Our answer, given parenthetically, was: "No, it actually was green once, but changing ocean currents changed that." Eugene F. McDonald writes to say the answer should have been: No, Eric the Red was not color blind, but he was the first real estate salesman in the world. Mr. McDonald states that this shyster was banished from Iceland for a period of years, during which banishment he went to Greenland [circa 980]. Returning to Iceland after making penance, he nastily set out to entice others to Greenland. Thus the name. In his time Greenland was as bleakly desolate as now, 700,000 square miles of land, two thirds of which is covered by the Greenland ice cap, but centuries before his visit it was tropical. Coal has been found in some areas, as have fossils of the giant sequoia [California redwood].

The end of the war definitely is near. A little coffee shop on Adams st. announces in big bold letters: "No Help Wanted. We have sufficient capable help to assure our patrons of prompt and efficient service." [Man bites dog, too.]

The other day we reported the fact that Goebbels had issued a special decree closing the Berlin doll shop of Frau Kate Kruse because she has given "sad and desperate faces" to her dolls since her son was killed in the war. A refugee who for years was associated with Frau Kruse called the next morning with more details. Frau Kruse had 13 children. Her dolls were portraits of her children. She made only 13 different dolls. One was called The Dreamer. The Dreamer was her youngest son. It was he who was killed.

And from Sgt. Robert A. Blocki in India comes word that "Hats, HBT," letters which puzzled us back in February when the army offered a big surplus stock of them for sale, means hats, herringbone twill. This sounds fancy, he says, but actually is the big, sloppy fatigue hat seen in the movies. Sgt. Blocki says he can think of no civilian use for it unless it could be sold to the bobby sox brigade: "It is sloppy enough to appeal to them!"

WHAT LAW?

Chicago, March 21.—The air is full of talk about curfew violations as "law breaking." What law, and who made it? Congress has made no such law, and would not have the power to do so. Closing hours of taverns and amusement places are within the reserved police power of the states, in which congress cannot constitutionally meddle. Congress is the sole federal law making authority and cannot constitutionally delegate that power. Administrative regulations have the effect of law only when issued to effectuate the purposes of a statute within statutory limitations. No federal administrative official, even the President, can make law by his own proclamation. Jimmy Byrnes' pronouncement, regarded as law, is "vox et praeterea nihil," no matter how thin you slice it.

That is not to say the curfew should be ignored. It is a request made by a high official, close to the President, in the interest of the war, perhaps for more pressing reasons than have been publicly disclosed. It is the duty of every citizen to coöperate voluntarily, and of local governments such as city councils to furnish legal authority for dealing with those who will not cooperate.

But such requests should be presented frankly as requests and appeals to American patriotism, not as orders. To issue them as edicts, to represent them as law, to attempt to enforce them directly on citizens thru federal enforcement agencies or indirectly by such sneaking methods as withholding rations and priorities is pure usurpation. Possibly Mayor La Guardia, however unworthy his motives may be, has rendered a public service in forcing both Mr. Byrnes and the President to acknowledge that they have no legal power to enforce the curfew.

THE SILENT VOICES.

Chicago, March 14.—Clouds of cynicism are emanating from the proposed world organization. Into the so-called peace organization are admitted only those nations which are blessed by the vapors of communism and totalitarianism. Nations which are really peaceful, such as Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, are excluded from the San Francisco conference, and apparently they will be excluded from the world organization.

Why? Russia does not want some of them because they are not communistic, and others because she intends to absorb them. Victims of aggression are not to be permitted to speak. Their fate is to be decided by the aggressor. This explains why the term "justice" has not found room in the Dumbarton Oaks plan. It seems that the new world league is being built on and will be maintained by force without justice or equity.

CONDITIONS ON THE RIVIERA.

Chicago, March 12.—David Darrah's account that the easy life is gone but Nice still loafs in the sun may give wrong impressions to your readers about France. The story that the people of France, and those living on the French Riviera, are near starvation is not exaggerated. True, in certain parts of the country, as in Normandy, Picardy, Burgundy, where the land is very rich, life is comparatively easy. But other provinces, which had to transport their main supply of food from the rich areas, are now left to suffer, as the railways have been repaired mainly for the army's benefit.

I have in hand letters from my family, living in Juan-les-pins and Nice, where conditions are described as being far from rosy. If you call receiving a half pound of dried peas [unusable] and one pound of macaroni a week, plus two-thirds of a pound of daily bread and an occasional half pound of meat adequate food, you should try it some time. With no other food or fats, it is not so easy to keep warm, even if the lowest temperatures are around 50, as proteins are necessary for body warmth. Those who are lucky enough to have a garden can supplement their rations, but the ones living in the cities do not fare so well. Children have to stay in bed, being sickly from lack of proper food. D. MAGILL.

LOST LAUNDRY.

Chicago, March 2.—It's about time some law enforcing body investigates laundries to protect victims of lost bundles. For two months my wife has been battling with a laundry merely to replace a large bundle which was lost. They finally admitted they couldn't replace the articles and offered her about 25 per cent of the value, saying this is all they could pay and she should be glad to get this. If they lose a few small articles or tear your bed linens and you complain, the laundry will say it's due to poor help. READER.

"BAD" NAME.

Chicago, March 24.—When our family came to this country our grandfather discovered that his name was unpronounceable in English and translated it meant something bad. So he changed it. We have used the changed name ever since. Is there anything more we need do to insure the legality of transactions made by our Americanized version of an old country surname?

L. F.

No. "It is sufficient in legal proceedings and elsewhere that a person is designated by a name by which he is commonly known and called, even tho it is not his true name. . . . A marriage by the name by which the individual is commonly known is valid. . . . Where it is not done for fraudulent purpose, and in the absence of statutory restriction, one may lawfully change his name without resort to any legal proceedings, and for all purposes the name thus assumed will constitute his legal name just as if he had borne it from birth." 45 C. J. 390, 381.

Illinois revised statutes, chapter 95, section 4, says that if an assumed name is used in business, a certificate must be filed with the clerk of the county court.

500 LEAVE JOBS IN 126TH STRIKE AT DODGE PLANT

800 Halt Operations of Another War Factory.

The 126th strike since December, 1942, occurred yesterday at the Dodge Chicago plant, where Wright designed engines for B-29 Super Fortresses are produced. Meanwhile, two other war material plants making 105 millimeter shells and 155 millimeter and 8 inch howitzer gun carriages were almost completely closed down by strikes.

"Five hundred first shift employes in the gear division of the Dodge Chicago plant left their war work at 3 p. m. after refusing to change tools in their machines," the company said.

"It has been the practice in this division for these workers to change the tools, but today they insisted it be done by job setters. They left their war jobs without first submitting a grievance, as provided by the bargaining procedure of their union's contract."

The majority of the strikers are members of the United Automobile, Aircraft, and Agricultural Implement Workers' union [CIO].

Shell Output Halted.

Production of 105 millimeter shells was shut down by a strike of 800 workers at the Cribben & Sexton company, 700 N. Sacramento av.

At a union meeting Sunday 600 workers were notified by Frank Powers, president of the United Stove Workers' union, affiliated with the Confederated Unions of America, that he had called the strike to enforce a 5 per cent wage increase "or the establishment by the company of a retirement plan for the union's members" without first holding a strike vote as provided by the Smith-Connally law.

The small, flashily dressed union president, using an expensive cigar as a pointer, while his breast pocket bulged with cigars of a similar brand, warned the union members not to try to enter the plant yesterday morning. Few disobeyed the order, altho Capt. George Barnes, head of the police labor detail, and 50 policemen were at the plant at 6 a. m. to protect those who might want to enter.

"No Right to Dispute."

Powers admitted that the union's demand for a wage increase was already being processed by the war labor board, but he maintained that the company "had no right to dispute the union's demand for the increase."

In addition to making 105 millimeter high explosive shells by the "thousands," the company said it was producing airplane assemblies and parts for both the army air forces and the navy.

At the Pettibone-Mulliken corporation, 4710 Division st., production of 155 millimeter and 8 inch howitzer gun carriages was still at a standstill. Members of district 8 of the International Association of Machinists [AFL], during a meeting yesterday morning, defied a plea by James McDonald, business agent of the union, that they return to work. The meeting was recessed until this morning.

2 FAREWELL LETTERS TO BERRIEN TARRANT WIN DIVORCE DECREE

Berrien Tarrant.

Berrien Tarrant, 35, of 2229 Kenilworth av., Wilmette, an insurance representative, won a divorce from his wife, Jean, 34, for desertion yesterday after showing Superior Judge John A. Sbarbaro two letters in which she announced she was leaving.

Judge Sbarbaro awarded custody of the couple's child, Kent, 7, to Tarrant, but stipulated that Mrs. Tarrant should have the boy in the summer months. Thru his attorney, A. F. W. Siebel, Tarrant agreed to pay Mrs. Tarrant $2 a day when the child is with her.

In an earlier suit, Tarrant had charged his wife with adultery, naming Alan Ashcraft, a former master in chancery and state representative, as co-respondent. This suit was dismissed. The Tarrants were married in 1929 and separated in 1944.

The suburbs south of Chicago are content to watch the development of the Kelly-Green plan for a public traction authority to operate the surface lines and the elevated system without taking an active part in it, a survey disclosed yesterday. Generally, they feel their interests are affected only indirectly.

Several officials of these suburbs said, however, they are in sympathy with anything which will result in real improvement of Chicago's traction systems. They added they are hopeful that their communities will receive some benefit.

No Complaints Heard.

Most of the southern suburbs depend principally on steam or electrified steam railroads and on bus lines, all outside the jurisdiction of the proposed traction authority, for transportation to Chicago, and no complaints were heard about the service these roads are giving.

The principal interurban line is the South Suburban Safeway Lines, Inc., a bus company which serves 25 communities over 150 route miles, operating 90 buses with 10 more on order approved by the office of defense transportation.

Goes Into Will County.

This line, which is privately owned, gives local service in some of the larger southern suburbs and local service in the southern sections of Chicago, paralleling at least one route of the Chicago Surface Lines. It grew from a five bus system at its organization in 1927, and has always shown a profit. Officials of three suburbs, Blue Island, Harvey, and Chicago Heights, said they had heard no complaints about its service.

John M. Hart, mayor of Blue Island, said he did not believe the Safeway corporation could be included in the county-wide traction authority because it operates into Will county, serving Crete. Officials of the company supported this view. Hart said that Blue Island probably would not be affected by the traction authority unless the surface lines extended bus service there.

COUNCIL IS ASSURED OF ITS POWERS IN TRACTION PLANNING

Aldermen who attended a meeting of the council committee on local transportation yesterday were assured that the proposed metropolitan transit district plan would not deprive the city of any powers it now has over traction problems.

Under the plan the city would purchase the elevated and surface lines for 87 million dollars and sell them for the same price to the metropolitan district authority for unification and operation.

Philip Harrington, subway commissioner, told the aldermen that the city had no power other than to specify what streets the traction companies could or could not use. This power, he said, could be protected in an ordinance granting the authority a franchise. The ordinance is a companion piece to the state law to create the authority and both are to be submitted to referendum, possibly on June 4.

Harrington said he preferred a terminable franchise rather than one with a set term of years, holding that this would best promote traction improvements and make for easier financing.

HUMBER OFFERS MINNESOTA HIS ONE-WORLD PLAN

St. Paul, Minn., March 26 [Special].—Robert Lee Humber, the expatriate international lawyer who is attempting to induce American state legislatures to petition congress for surrender of American sovereignty to a world state, brought his super state plan before the Minnesota legislature today.

Humber, who says that his plan has already been indorsed by 12 states and is pending in 10 others, arrived here quietly Saturday and promptly began pulling strings with majority elements in both houses of the legislature.

So rapidly and successfully did he work that today the familiar Humber resolution was introduced with influential sponsorship in both the house and senate.

Dunn Offers It in House.

In the house the measure was introduced by Roy E. Dunn, Minnesota's Republican national committeeman, who is the house majority leader and chairman of the house rules committee. In the senate the sponsors were Senators Charles N. Orr, St. Paul; J. V. Weber, Slayton, and A. O. Sletvold, Detroit Lakes. Orr is chairman of the senate rules committee.

The measure declares among other things, "It is better for the world to be ruled by an international sovereignty of reason, social justice, and peace than by diverse national sovereignties."

It calls upon Minnesota representatives in congress to work for passage of a measure committing the United States to the principle of a federation of the world and requesting the President to call an international convention to formulate a constitution.

Humber got a minor setback when legislative leaders declined his request for an opportunity to address a joint session in regard to his plan.

Plan Vote Next Week.

"This was considered inadvisable because of the amount of legislative work on hand," said Dunn. He added the resolution will be referred to the rules committees of both houses and will come out for a vote next Monday or Tuesday.

Commenting on the resolution, Dunn said he saw nothing in it that "could hurt anybody," and expected there would be no opposition to its passage. After word of the sovereignty surrender proposal permeated thru legislative circles, however, Dunn said he guessed he would have to read it more carefully.

Humber attempted to push his resolution thru the Missouri legislature in February but its sponsors dropped plans for a quick vote after charges were made by the Jeffersonians, a Missouri group, that the Humber plan called for member nations of his proposed world federation to suppress their military, naval, and air forces, retaining only constabularies for police purposes.

No Recommendation Made.

The house resolutions committee of the legislature considered the Humber measure and sent it back without recommendation. It has been dormant since that time.

Humber told newspapermen here that 12 states have already adopted his resolution. He listed these as North Carolina, New Jersey, Maryland, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Alabama, Virginia, Louisiana, Tennessee, Utah, Oklahoma, and New Hampshire.

Humber is a native of North Carolina who practiced international law in Paris for 16 years, getting out of the French capital 60 hours ahead of the German invasion in 1940. He is a graduate of the Harvard law school and a former Rhodes scholar at Oxford, England.

800 CONVICTS REFUSE TO EAT WITH NEGROES

San Quentin, Cal., March 26 (AP).—Eight hundred white San Quentin convicts refused tonight to eat with 477 Negroes and waited until the latter had finished before filing into the mess hall.

The silent demonstration was in sharp contrast to last night's mess hall riot in which one inmate was stabbed and three were injured. The protests were directed against Warden Clinton Duffy's order allowing Negroes and whites to eat together.

About 1,300 whites ate with the Negroes tonight. The 800 dissenters were allowed to dine later. Warden Duffy, however, insisted he would not go back on his order lifting segregation.

ORDERS 6 MEN PUT BACK ON LYONS BALLOT

The names of six candidates of the Regular People's party running for office in the April 17 elections in the village of Lyons were restored to the ballot yesterday under a ruling by Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher.

Ruling on a mandamus suit filed by Atty. Urban A. Lavery, Judge Fisher held that Walter A. White, a member of the village election board which struck the names from the ballot, was illegally represented as village clerk, altho he actually was chief of police.

Judge Fisher ordered County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki to dissolve the village board and return all papers to the village council.

ROB HOTEL CLERK OF $75.

Glen Jewett, a clerk in the Woodmere hotel, 4641 Woodlawn av., was robbed early yesterday of $75 by two armed men at the hotel desk, he told police.

CHARGES JOBS BILL SHACKLES U. S. WAR LABOR

Washington, D. C., March 26—(AP).—Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] today denounced the compromise man power bill as a "repudiation of democracy" and asserted it would "put leg irons on the men, women, and children" who have built America's war machine.

Sen. O'Mahoney.

Both O'Mahoney and Rep. Short [R., Mo.] declined to sign the report issued by a committee of house and senate members named to reconcile the varying man power views of the two legislative bodies.

"This is a tremendously dangerous bill," O'Mahoney told reporters. He complained that it included prison penalties for those who violate regulations which he said "will be written in secret, in private rooms, behind closed doors, where people who will be affected by them will have no chance to change them."

Kilgore Opposes Bill.

Sen. Kilgore [D., W. Va.] said in a statement that he would urge rejection of the compromise, having discussed the revised measure with representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Federation of Labor, and the CIO.

The compromise bill will come up in the house for action tomorrow, with little opposition anticipated there. Originally the house indorsed a work-or-jail bill, while the senate held out for a voluntary method of directing workers into war essential industries.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, reiterated that organization's opposition to any compulsory man power legislation. In telegrams to congressmen he said it was inconceivable that at this time "congress would even consider the passage of a bill which smacks of slavery."

Provisions of Measure.

1. Fix employment ceilings for any plant or industry.
2. Control the hiring and job transferring of workers.
3. Freeze employes in their jobs.
4. Call upon any other government agency to help him operate the program.

Chairman Thomas [D., Utah] of the senate military committee told newsmen the bill was "a very strong" one, adding that he was uncertain whether the senate would accept it.

They were married on June 8, 1935, and have three children, Herman III., 8, Elise, 6, and William, 3. Mrs. Bundesen is the former Elise V. Felix.

Review of Contempt Case Refused by Supreme Court

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—The Supreme court refused today to review a contempt of court case in which William A. Doss, Monticello, Ill., was sentenced to three months' imprisonment and fined $2,000. Doss asked a review of the refusal by the eastern Illinois federal District court and the Seventh federal Circuit court to grant him a writ of habeas corpus. He was sentenced on the contempt charge in the Circuit court of Piatt county, Illinois. The charge was based on statements made in a mimeographed paper published by Doss.

SUPREME COURT AGAIN DECLINES RULING ON WARD

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—The Supreme court again refused today to take immediate jurisdiction of the Montgomery Ward case. It issued a brief order which stated the government's petition for reconsideration was denied.

The tribunal on March 12 rejected requests by the government and Ward attorneys that it make a speedy determination on the validity of army seizure of the company's properties in seven cities. Both sides sought to appeal directly to the Supreme court from the decision of the United States District court in Chicago that the President lacked authority to order the facilities seized because of the company's noncompliance with a war labor board directive.

U. S. PREPARES APPEAL.

United States Atty. Woll said yesterday in Chicago that the government's brief will be ready for filing with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals by the end of this week. The court gave the government until April 1 to file its brief, and gave attorneys for Wards until April 20 to file a reply, after which the government will have 10 days to answer. No date has been set for argument.

INDICT GIRL, 16, WHO TURNED GAS ON HER MOTHER

Bernice Reynolds, 16, of 629 Fox st., Aurora, was indicted by the Kane county grand jury at Geneva yesterday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon and assault with intent to murder. The charges grew out of her action last Feb. 5 in turning on all the gas burners in the kitchen stove of her home, in which her mother, Mrs. Lottie Reynolds, was sleeping. Her mother was overcome by gas, but was revived. Bernice admitted turning on the gas, police said, explaining that she was vexed with her mother for interfering with her projected marriage to Clyde Swope, 18, of Ottumwa, Ia., now in the army.

LEXINGTON LOSS LESSON TOLD ON W-G-N SHOW

Why the gallant aircraft carrier Lexington had to be destroyed by other American warships after the Battle of the Coral Sea was told last night in the eighth program of America Unlimited, a weekly series of broadcasts over station W-G-N dramatizing the role of war workers and their products.

Hit by several Japanese torpedos and bombs, the huge Lexington had been forced to slip away from the main battle of the Coral Sea just as dusk fell. Damage control parties worked furiously to repair the havoc caused by the enemy shells. But finally, just as their job seemed completed, a new explosion racked the ship. Sprung joints in the gasoline lines had allowed explosive fumes to escape.

Hand Pumps Useless.

Even the new fire that followed, however, did not seem serious until it was discovered that the main propulsion engines, which also operated the water pumps, had been damaged. The fire grew until hand pumps were useless. The Lexington had to be destroyed.

Later naval engineers realized that the Lexington might have been saved if the damage control parties had had separate pumps powered by mobile engines. The Buda company, Harvey, was given the job of building such an engine. Last week Rear Adm. E. L. Cochrane, chief of the bureau of ships, reported how well the company had solved the problem in the following citation:

"Thanks to a Buda diesel engine powering a small centrifugal pump a United States escort carrier was enabled to continue fighting after sustaining heavy damage in naval action off the Philippines...."

Radar Story Is Next.

America Unlimited is presented each Monday night over W-G-N from 9 to 9:30. The series is sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, W-G-N, and leading war industries, in cooperation with the army, navy, and federal war agencies.

Next Monday's story will tell of the use allied troops have made of the products of the Hallicrafters company, manufacturers of radio and radar equipment. It will be the concluding program of the series.

BLONDE FOUND WITH MEDLEY TALKS TO JURY

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—Mrs. Mabel W. Muller, platinum blonde saleswoman, was identified today as the companion of Joseph D. Medley, accused of slaying Mrs. Nancy Boyer, at the time of his arrest in St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. Mabel Muller.

United States Atty. Edward M. Curran disclosed the attractive woman's identity, which law officers had shielded, as she went before a federal grand jury investigating the fatal shooting of the red haired Mrs. Boyer in a Washington apartment hotel.

Mrs. Muller, a department store employe, was held briefly after Medley's arrest in a St. Louis hotel March 18 and no charge was placed against her. She was brought here to tell the grand jury what she knows about Medley, fugitive from a Michigan prison and a suspect also in the death of two women in Chicago and New Orleans hotels.

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—Steve Early bowed out today as Presidential press relations secretary and Jonathan Daniels took over the spot.

Early had planned for some time to resign and take private employment to recoup his finances.

Early, for a time, will serve as Mr. Roosevelt's appointment secretary, replacing the late Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson. By June 1 he will be free to accept an offer of private employment.

To date, Early told reporters, he has not accepted an offer.

"I'm wide open," he said. "I haven't negotiated anything."

Early was busy removing the 12 year accumulation of papers from the desk which Daniels will occupy. He said it was a somewhat pleasant but dirty job.

Early just returned from a mission to Europe on which he surveyed public relations for the army.

Two Interesting Dinner Events Are Scheduled

BY JUDITH CASS.

TWO interesting dinner meetings are on the immediate calendar, one Friday night in the Casino, following which Frank Lloyd Wright, internationally known architect, will speak, and the other Wednesday night of next week, when the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations will entertain in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel for Secretary of State Stettinius.

The Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects is presenting Mr. Wright, hailed as "ex-Chicagoan, citizen of the world, and philosopher," in the lecture announcements. Alfred P. Shaw, president of the chapter, and Mrs. Shaw, and Nathaniel Owings, a member of the program committee, and Mrs. Owings are among those who will entertain at dinner in the Casino before Mr. Wright's informal lecture at 8 p. m. on his new projects, past failures, and future hopes. The Walter P. Paepckes and the Byron S. Harveys will be other dinner hosts. Tickets to the lecture only may be obtained at the door for $1.50.

Two chapter members passed thru town recently, Lt. Col. Walter Frazier, who is stationed in San Bernardino, Cal., and Lt. Comdr. Shepard Vogelgesang. Comdr. Vogelgesang, accompanied by his wife, was here for a few hours Friday on his way to the west coast to report for duty.

The only woman who will be invited to sit at the speakers' table when Mr. Stettinius speaks is Mrs. John Paul Welling. As Mr. Stettinius will be here that day only, many who had hoped to entertain for him will be disappointed. He was born in Chicago. Adlai E. Stevenson, a former president of the council and a special assistant to the secretary of state, will come to Chicago with Mr. Stettinius.

Engagement News.

At a party in the east Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Hamilton of Bronxville, N. Y., announced the engagement of their daughter, Roxanne Elizabeth, to Lt. Henry Glos Bates of the army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alben Frederick Bates of Elmhurst. Miss Hamilton was graduated in February from Cornell university. A nationally known swimmer, she holds championship titles and records in breast stroke, back stroke, and free style, and was a member of the relay team which set a world record in 1940.

Lt. Bates, a fourth generation Chicagoan on both sides of his family, was graduated from Cornell in 1944. He is a member of the yacht club in Lake Geneva, Wis., where his parents have a summer home. He received his commission from Fort Sill, Okla., and is stationed in Fort Jackson, S. C.

News of Births.

Master Sgt. and Mrs. Nicholas Blatchford [Lois Greeley] became the parents of a daughter, their first child, yesterday in the Evanston hospital. The baby, who has been named Anne Hathaway after her maternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Arthur S. Coffin of Winnetka, is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Greeley and of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Blatchford, all of Winnetka.

A transfer to Wright field, Dayton, O., gave Maj. Andrew P. Rebori the chance to be here over the week-end to welcome his daughter, Nina Eleanor, who was born Saturday night in the Sherman hospital in Elgin. The baby's first name is a variation of Nan, the name shared by Maj. Rebori's mother, the late Mrs. Andrew Rebori, and his sister, Mrs. Rebori Frothingham. The middle name is for her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Leonard D. Karcher of Barrington. Young Mrs. Rebori is the former Barbara Willson. The baby's paternal grandfather, Andrew Rebori, lives in Chicago.

In a hospital in England, where he has been recuperating for three months from wounds received in Germany, Pvt. John A. Haney has learned of the birth of his daughter, Caren Elise, Saturday, in the Evanston hospital. The baby's mother is the former Elise Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Jones of Evanston. Mrs. Joseph Walker of Ada, Okla., is her paternal grandmother.

On the Calendar.

A different type of war time benefit is being planned by the Illinois Opera guild to increase its bank account, from which it maintains the Opera Guild music room in the Great Lakes hospital and also provides service men and women and music students with tickets to the opera. Instead of one big party in town, the guild's members have conceived the idea of having smaller neighborhood parties to conserve time and transportation. The benefit committee, headed by Mrs. William H. Spurgeon, has asked each member of the guild to arrange a small party at her home in the week of April 15 to 21, from which the entire proceeds of $5 a table, if bridge is the entertainment, will be sent to the guild.

Members of the benefit committee of the Auxiliary Ambulance Corps of Illinois will entertain at 4 p. m. today in the Key club for Mrs. Royden J. Keith, retiring president of the group, and Mrs. Herbert C. Hoagland, retiring secretary. Mrs. Grier D. Patterson has arranged the party.

John Van Druten came into town yesterday to take another look at K. T. Stevens, Hugh Marlowe, and Betty Lawford in "The Voice of the Turtle," on his way back to California to finish the novel that is all he has in the workshop just now, those play rumors notwithstanding. He saw all the new shows and a few operas and was sad, being a Lotte Lehmann addict, to have missed her here. He liked "On the Town," but his picks for the hit parade were the Metropolitan's "Don Giovanni" with Bruno Walter conducting — the performance due at the opera house May 2—and the New Haven tryout of "Carrousel," the Richard Rodgers-Oscar Hammerstein II. musical version of "Liliom," with John Raitt in the leading role.

Mr. Van Druten goes gypsy on us and utters a prediction. Mr. Raitt, he says, will be the biggest success in years in "Carrousel" and when Hollywood snatches him back he will outdistance Nelson Eddy at the boxoffice. It seems that in the new show, as in "Oklahoma!", he has wonderful songs, and Chicago knows he has the voice to sing them. Van Druten's favorite is "My Son Billy," which we all will be hearing soon.

Aside from that novel, Mr. Van Druten's chief concerns are the movie script of the "Turtle," which he will write eventually, and the immediate acquisition of some silver lamé. New York's heroine is now on her eighth dress and needs, but can't find, a new one, and the only length of lamé left in Chicago is being held, you guessed it, for K. T. Stevens.

When "Catherine Was Great" ends its Studebaker engagement, Mae West will take it to the coast, but she plans a return next season in a revival of "Diamond Lil," which ran more than nine months at the Apollo back in 1929. Lee Shubert will be the producer.

Altho they keep on denying it, theater gossip insists the Shuberts either bought the Majestic or will lease it from the owner. Plans for the long abandoned theater include reseating the main floor, ripping out the gallery, and extending the balcony. The remodeled job will seat almost 2,000 people, which is just what the big musicals would like.

"Jacobowsky and the Colonel" comes to the Blackstone May 14. . . . Said the press agent of "Dear Ruth" to the press agent of "Othello," "You must have a hit. I see it has been published." . . . Arturo Toscanini had to cancel his Philadelphia orchestra pension fund concert because of ill health, but Bruno Walter immediately agreed to replace him April 17. . . . The overseas "Up in Central Park" will have scenery and backdrops constructed as part of a giant sized book, the pages turning as the action advances. . . . Lloyd Lewis writes his last drama criticism for the News with "Sing Out, Sweet Land!" and Bob Casey takes over the beat with "One Touch of Venus." That adds up to farewell and hail.

Dress-Jacket Duos Attract Easter Buyers

BY REA SEEGER.

If present sales records are accurate barometer readings of what will be significant high fashion after the Easter parade next Sunday, ensemble costumes of soft flattering jacket and companion dress will triumph over suits or coats. Such unquestionably dress-parade ensembles have been spotlight stealers during the last few weeks. The slim, simple dresses made of the same colored wool as the jacket are miracles of line and fit. Necklines are soft and gracious, sleeves of the dress are very short, and the skirts continue to follow the lines of least resistance against the L.85 rulings by keeping trim and slender.

Again the fine dressmaker details accent both jacket and dress. Tiny gold buttons fasten one gray jacket, so that they match the narrow gold kidskin belt that encircles the waist of the simple dress. A gold colored wool dress made with a plaited skirt also has a gold studded decorative belt, and the swing hiplength jacket has a tuxedo collar. Other ensembles of dress with jacket are trimmed with such fluffy fur as honey colored fox, with subtle platinum gray furs or with short fur—mink, caracul, or kolinsky.

Pastel colors are especially fresh and springlike after weeks and months of drab or dark winter shades. Lime green, daffodil yellow, summer sky-blue, the fragile tints of pink and mauve, and the shades of palest beige and gray are typical new spring colors in these extremely flattering ensembles. Altho all are of wool, the material is of summer weight. The dresses are unusually chic, and are ready for wear without the jacket later in the season with strong contrast gloves and other accessories.

City Council Seeks to Help Day Nurseries

Ways and means of filling Chicago's acute need for day nurseries for children of war workers and keeping the nurseries safe and sanitary in compliance with governing ordinances was the problem referred yesterday to a city council subcommittee on health working with a subcommittee on building and zoning. A suggestion was made to the fire, health, and building departments to withhold enforcement of closing orders sent a number of schools.

The moves were the outcome of a meeting of the city council committee on health called by Ald. Gillespie [29th], chairman, to consider proposals to modify and clarify nursery regulations. The hearing came after Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, closed four nurseries earlier this month.

Representatives of some of the nurseries charged with violations outlined their efforts to comply with the ordinances. They explained the need for the nurseries, saying they had long waiting lists, while Dr. Bundesen and John L. Fenn, chief of the fire prevention bureau, warned of tragedies that could follow relaxations of rules.

Mrs. Katherine Fromer of the Pine Grove pre-school, 2817 Pine Grove av., a parents' nonprofit cooperative, described as "quite a shock" receipt of notices from the fire and building departments that the brick structure was unsuitable for a nursery.

"The code seems to indicate," she said, "that we should leave a good strong building and move into a garage." She said that in organizing the school the parents had sought approval from state authorities and failed to check with city officials.

Mrs. Mabel Schubert, operator of the Jolly Fun house, 4754 N. Paulina st., a frame building now closed, said she had come into court twice for a hearing but each time the case was continued.

Dr. Bundesen reported that his department knew of 117 day nurseries in Chicago. Forty-eight are operated under the sponsorship of the board of education and are not supervised by the department of health, he said. Of the remaining 69, four have received their permits; 13 have received notices of violations—three of which have been closed while the other 10 are near the expiration of their 15 days' grace; 42 have been found to have minor violations and are believed to be correcting them, and one nursery has gone out of business.

Paul Gerhardt Jr., building commissioner, explained to nursery operators that their fire department violations might rise with the height of the buildings—a two story must be semi-fireproof, while three stories must be fireproof. As to zoning, he said nurseries are not restricted to business districts but can be operated where apartments are located.

Operators of the closed nurseries indicated they were getting along under temporary arrangements. Dr. Bundesen said that he would be glad to see any nursery operators charged with violations to talk over means of bringing their premises up to standard. He added that few nurseries were violating health ordinances.

On the subcommittee, named after a motion by Ald. O'Hallaren [18th] were the following from the health committee: Aldermen Lancaster [37th], Cohen [4th], Olin [8th], Cowhey [41st], and Young [46th], and from the building and zoning group — O'Hallaren [18th], Duffy [19th], Wagner [14th], Moss [5th], and Kacena [22d].

Child Having Morbid Spells During Night Needs Checkup

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

An interesting letter, rather out of the usual run of problems that come to my desk, is the following:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:

"This is a request that you run an article on the mental hygiene of a 3 year old. A friend's little girl, who will be four in April has stayed here several evenings and really alarmed me. She has never fallen asleep before 11:30 or midnight. Several times each evening I hear her crying and get her explanations: 'I'm sorry about the war,' or 'Feel all this blood; my arm is cut off.'

"Her parents attribute it all to 'vivid imagination,' but I can't help but draw comparisons with my 3 year old boy. He and this little girl lead similar lives, playing outdoors together daily, and yet my boy is asleep by eight; and his 'vivid imagination' is expressed in stories during the day time, not morbid spells at night. Last night I suggested to the little girl that we talk about something pleasant, such as the valentine party we had all attended. 'I'm the only little girl there who didn't get ice cream and cake' she replied. [Of course I know she did!].

"She and my boy are both good-looking children, above the usual 3 year old mentality. They write their names, numbers, and so forth, yet why the martyr complex on the child's part? Both the parents seem emotionally stable and perfectly sane."

As the concerned friend remarks,

this is definitely a mental hygiene problem.

With no more to go on than these few particulars [a consulting psychologist often requires a dozen or more interviews with parents and child], I would hazard these opinions and suggestions:

That this little girl feels insecure in her parents' affections, due possibly to a lack of real interest in her;

That she craves the right sort of attention from them but, because she doesn't get it, is unhappy and confused;

That this emotional disturbance results in her behavior as described;

And that she is allowed to hear too much war talk and is perhaps taken to disturbing movies.

She needs a quieting physical "program" at home, and calm, interested, loving attention from her parents, and a special "dose" of the latter, just before bed time.

Club Head Deplores Physical Conditions Uncovered by Draft

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP). —Mrs. Lafell Dickinson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, said today 4,500,000 rejections for military service because of physical defects are an "indictment" of American homemakers.

"I think we women are to blame," she declared. "I think the situation is evidence that we have failed to bring up and feed our children properly, failed to find out about or take full advantage of health measures which might have corrected many defects."

Mrs. Dickinson made that summation in opening a five day conference of health chairmen representing the federated women's clubs of 21 states. The conference was arranged jointly by the federation and the United States public health service.

Roy M. Mason Water Colors Rich in Beauty

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

A richly beautiful group of water colors by Roy M. Mason is the new exhibit in the Ackermann Galleries, 408 S. Michigan av. They are paintings the lover of sports as well as art will like.

"Western Trout Water" is full of excitement and thrill and "Pickerel Fishing," "Yarded Deer," and "Shore Dinner" are made for enthusiasts. "Them Bayou Niggers" and "Adirondack Winter" are two of the most gorgeously handled water colors Chicago has ever seen. Mr. Mason paints with a full brush and a wide sweep. His work is not impressionistic except in the fact that it is generous, spontaneous, and big.

Roy Mason is famous among American water colorists. He has won many prizes, including two important Chicago awards—the Logan medal, first for water color, in 1941, and in the same year the Watson Blair purchase prize at the Art institute. His exhibition will continue to April 21 and is well worth seeing. It is a magnificent show.

A rather duller exhibit is that of portraits and figure paintings by Robert Philipp, which opened yesterday in the Associated American Artists galleries, 846 N. Michigan av. He is not a newcomer to Chicago; he has been Carnegie visiting professor at the University of Illinois and a winner of the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal at the Art institute.

Philipp's style is French and his work is reminiscent of Renoir. His paiting is soft and warm, delicious in color. We thought the best piece in his show was "Fruit," a beautiful still life. A little "Head of a Girl" is piquant and "Girl with China Cup" is appealing.

If you care for Philipp's technique, you will enjoy the exhibit; he never varies his painting. As long as we are not on the Riviera, however, it might bring his painting more into line with America if his studio opened its windows to a sharp lake or river breeze. Renoir, when all is said and done, lived in a different age and a different climate.

The exhibition will continue thru April 7. Philipp will be in Chicago from the first of April thru that date.

JOURNEY UNDERGROUND

(Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.)

INSTALMENT XXVII.

What a relief it was to be out of that back seat, built for a parcel or two, but certainly not for two long legged men. I looked at the double house in front of us, which was to be our home for two months.

The front door was opened by a little old lady who was evidently well known to both Mme. Andre and M. Pelerin, for the three of them immediately engaged in a lively conversation. The old lady led us thru the house into the kitchen, where a middle aged woman was sitting at a table. Mme. Andre rushed over to greet her and then introduced us, explaining we were the airmen who would stay there until the time came for us to go to Spain.

Mme. Andre took the chair at the table, telling the woman she would try to get as much food as possible for us, but that possibly we would to some degree strain the household larder. She gave our hostess, Mme. Maurice, some food tickets for bread, vegetables, sugar, and a few other commodities.

Looking around this little room, I saw that one end was filled with a large stove, which in peace time provided central heating, as well as being used for cooking. One of the oven doors was dropped down to form a little platform where a lazy Siamese cat sprawled most of the day.

Mme. Andre told Mme. Maurice, that I spoke "French very well, so you will not have any difficulty making yourself understood."

I felt inclined to modify this estimate of my ability to speak French, but Mme. Maurice said, "Well, just so long as he knows a little French, that is the most important thing."

Mme. Andre became businesslike again and started an inspection of our identity cards. She first looked at mine. I told her that I had been advised to have it replaced because my name, David, had been used on the card, and it appeared that David was a Jewish name in France, or at least a name that might attract the attention of an examining officer. She agreed this was probably true, and took the card from me.

Then she closely inspected Herk's card, and took his, too.

She then asked for any other identification cards we might have. I told her that I had my dog tags, but did not mention my AGO [army identification] card then. This card gave me much more confidence than the little metal tags, and if the Germans caught me in civilian clothes, I felt I would want all the real identification possible.

Herk had no dog tags and no

card, so in his case the question was quickly settled.

Mme. Andre looked once again rather intensely, at my photo and then at my mustache and said, "That mustache is very good here, for to look like a young man in France today is dangerous."

She then turned to Mme. Maurice telling her that if she needed anything or should any difficulty arise, they would immediately do all they could to help. Madame smiled and said, "I think we shall be all right." Then Mme. Andre left with M. Pelerin saying that she would be back soon.

Herk and I stood rather awkwardly in the center of the room, until Mme. Maurice suggested that we get some chairs from the dining room and chat with them for a while. They asked us how we had been shot down, and how well the French had treated us. All these questions had to be translated for Herk, which was a tiring and at times vexing job.

The old woman, whom I almost immediately began to call Grandmere, was most excited by our stories, demanding the most minute details of bailing out, shooting German aircraft, and being shot at. At the end of each episode, she leaned back in her chair and exclaimed "Aye-yi-yi, now that is something."

This was really a jolly woman. She seemed to laugh or cry "Aye-yi-yi," on almost any occasion.

Her rapid speech was well mixed with argot, and I always had to urge her three or four times to repeat a sentence before she would consent to do so. Then it seemed that she would say it twice as fast as she had the first time. It was not until that last couple of weeks that I had any success in persuading her to speak more slowly. La Grandmere was small in stature, and looked her 74 years, but her actions were quick and vivacious, which made her seem no more than 50.

Mme. Maurice had no such a sprightly personality. She always seemed calm, composed, but she had great kindness and understanding. She never spoke at a rate of speed I could not understand, and was always willing to go to any amount of trouble to explain some difficult quirk of the French language that baffled me. She was a little taller than la Grandmere and a little thinner. Her face looked worn which made me think that she must have had a hard life.

Our first conversation came to an end when la Grandmere asked us if we would like to go to our room, which was upstairs at the front of the house. It was a spacious room for a house of this size, with a three-quarter bed in the middle, a large oriental armoire along the left wall, a large arm chair, and an oriental screen around the wash bowl. The dark blue wall paper was abundantly decorated with flowers, but it matched the gray rug. What interested me was a chromium railing fastened to the wall. I had noticed many little handles on the stairway also, but it was not until later in the evening that I discovered they were there for Mme. Maurice, who was crippled.

When the women retired to the kitchen, Herk did not say a word, and I finally broke the silence by rather feebly muttering, "I suppose we shall have to share this bed." Herk made no reply, so I started to undress to remove the uniform beneath my civilian clothes.

I was being unmistakably reminded of my lice at the moment, and began to wonder if I should tell Herk or not. It was only fair to do so, but I just could not bring myself to do it.

Herk was quite amazed at the contents of my pockets, and when the last article had been placed on the table, he asked, "Did you plan on this?"

He was most intrigued with the toothbrushes, particularly as he had not been able to get one during the month he had been in France. I gave him one. He was very pleased and immediately started to brush his teeth. By the time he had finished I had redressed.

The women had shared in preparing dinner. Not wanting us in the kitchen, they shooed us into the dining room, and gave us a copious supply of old picture magazines to keep us out of trouble.

After having passed an hour looking at these magazines, we heard a couple of people enter the house. For a few minutes there was quite a commotion in the kitchen. I heard the Grandmere say, "Yes, they are arrived, and they are so nice." I began to worry about the possibilities of these people not being very security minded, and telling all their friends that they were protecting two airmen.

The door opened and two young people came in. They were the daughter and son-in-law of Mme. Maurice.

Both were very pleasant and tried to make us feel at home. Michiline, Madame's daughter, was quite attractive, but by no means could she be considered beautiful. She had a good figure, altho it was inclined to be a little fat. Her face was plump, and there was a tendency for a double chin to appear from time to time. Her eyes were set wide apart, separated by a rather flat nose.

Louis was obviously a worker. He dressed in sloppy and baggy clothes, and his face often seemed to be slightly unshaved. Altho his face was oval, his mouth and nose were long and narrow, and he was cross-eyed. He had a low forehead, and his hair often fell in one or two curls over his eyes. Louis worked in an abbatoire, a very good place to work in these days when meat was so difficult to get. He could usually bring enough home for the family, and often had a surplus to trade for black market articles not obtainable with money.

However, there was a certain degree of danger in carrying meat thru the streets and especially in the Metro, for the police were on the lookout for the black market offenders there, too.

Louis told me that one night he had been stopped in the Metro by a policeman and asked what he was carrying in his bag. It, of course, was full of meat, and he was forced to show it to the gendarme, who asked where he was taking it. Louis replied he was taking it home to his family. The policeman seemed satisfied, but then demanded what he had in his shirt. It was more meat, and Louis had some difficulty convincing the gendarme that it was the double ration for his large family, all of whom were ill. The policeman still seemed a little baffled but said no more so Louis quickly walked away.

When Louis finished the story he asked us what we had been doing. I told him that we were amusing ourselves with some old magazines. He considered this very poor amusement indeed, and said that we needed a radio. "If you would like I shall bring mine," he said. "My house is only 200 yards away. In a few minutes he was back with an excellent set, and soon we were listening to Radio London and Algiers.

Singer Flaunts Traditions in Recital Here

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG.

Camille Anderson, a resident soprano, tilted bravely at several hoary traditions in her Kimball hall recital last night, and while her experiments were not equally successful, the results were interesting and provocative.

For one thing, Miss Anderson sang her program entirely in English, for which bit of audacity this department offers a grateful "Bravo!" Why the average singer feels he must sing in four or five languages to an audience that understands only one, and when he himself cannot even say "Pass the pie" intelligently in any tongue but his own, is one of those empty pretensions which encrust the business of concert giving. True, it took a bit of aural readjustment to listen to Brahms and Debussy in the vernacular, but insofar as Miss Anderson's diction permitted—a weak point in her argument—both the audience and the composers seemed the gainers thereby.

Novel, too, was the singer's disregard of the usual chronological sequence of her songs, beginning with such moderns as Respighi and Carpenter and working backward to Handel, Anne Boleyn, Henry VIII., and "Author Unknown [circa 1630]." No harmful effects were discoverable here either.

In the matter of accompaniment, this singer also went afield, securing Dorothy Lane, who does not often function in that capacity, to play beautifully sensitive accompaniments on the piano and persuading her to bring along her harpsichord for authentic backgrounds to the classical songs. Also, she permitted Miss Lane to play a solo, a Handel suite, on the harpsichord, in a wholly delightful manner.

By and large, Miss Anderson is a better musician than she is a vocalist. Her voice lacks sensuous color and vagaries of production offset handicap the projection of her musical intentions.

Since beets and cabbage are two of our most plentiful and moderately priced vegetables, we may as well combine them now and then in a gay colored salad, like this one, made with a gelatin base.

Beet and Cabbage Salad Ring.
[Serves six.]

1 package lemon flavored gelatin
1½ cups hot water
3 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon scraped onion
¼ cup beet juice
3 hard cooked eggs, cut in halves, then sliced
1 cup seasoned diced cooked beets
3 tablespoons water
1¼ cups salted, shredded cabbage

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add vinegar, salt, and onion. Measure 1 cup of mixture and reserve. Add beet juice to remaining gelatin. Cover bottom of ring mold with small amount. Chill. When slightly thickened, arrange egg slices in mixture. Chill until firm. Add beets to remaining beet juice mixture and turn into mold. Chill until firm. Add 3 tablespoons water and the cabbage to the reserved gelatin and turn into the mold. Chill again until firm. Unmold and garnish with lettuce and hard cooked eggs. Serve dressing separately.

How honest are the American people? It is estimated that there are 17 million more ration books in use than there are civilians entitled to ration books. Many families are guilty of using books issued to sons or husband now in the services. These books should have been turned in to local ration boards when the men departed. It has been suggested that continued use of ration books issued to persons who have died since rationing began is responsible for some of this kind of cheating.

A member of my staff who was in college when rationing began reports that there was much confusion among students regarding rationing. They were registered for books on the campus, and many of their parents also registered them at home, with the result that two books often were issued for each student. Probably some of this double operating still is going on.

Some of the girls and women who call us for information about cooking classes will be interested in the ones the Y. W. C. A. is offering next month. Eight weeks [one night a week] for $6.50. What could be a better bargain? These classes, starting April 17, are planned for persons who already know something about cooking. Beginners' classes will be held, too, seven weeks of them, starting April 12. A mere $2.50 will carry a beginner thru these seven lessons.

Pass	1 club	Pass	1 diamond
Pass	1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds
Pass	2 no trump	Pass	3 diamonds
Pass	4 diamonds	Pass	5 diamonds
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead, two of hearts.

Against the contract of five diamonds South opened the deuce of hearts. The king was played from dummy. North won with the ace and cashed the queen of hearts. Hoping that partner had the ace of spades he returned his singleton. East won the trick, took the diamond finesse and proceeded to take the remainder of the tricks in fulfillment of his lucky contract. "Nothing could be done about it, partner," said North. "I was hoping you had the ace of spades." This was not a hope, it was a wishful thought. If East did not have the ace of spades, whatever induced him to bid five diamonds? If East had not had good diamonds and the ace of spades, he would have taken his partner to three no trump instead of repeatedly warning him off by continued diamond rebids. The best wish for North to have made was for South to have had the king of diamonds.

The opening lead of the deuce of hearts shows that South has four of the suit; the declarer is therefore marked with three. The proper continuation by North would have been a heart forcing the declarer to trump with the deuce of diamonds in dummy. It would then have become impossible for South's king to have been captured. It does, however, go against the nature of some players to permit dummy to trump anything. A simple count to 13 would have been very profitable to North.

New Sherlock Film Provides Diverting Fare

Produced by Universal, directed by Roy William Neill, featuring Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Aubrey Mather, Gavin Muir, Dennis Hoey, Paul Cavenagh, and Holmes Herbert, and presented at the Palace.

By Mae Tinée.

Basil Rathbone, looking like an elegant bloodhound and clipping his words so short that understanding him is very often not a bit elemental, my dear Watson, is an extremely busy man in "The House of Fear." Said house is occupied by six men who form a group known as "The Good Comrades." They are all elderly and have no relatives to whom they care to leave anything, so their individual and large insurance policies are made out to the last surviving member of the group.

The film was taken from Arthur Conan Doyle's "Adventures of the Five Orange Pips." An envelope containing five of the fruit seeds is delivered mysteriously and the next day one member of the club dies accidentally but violently. The number of seeds delivered subsequently indicates infallibly the number to which the comrades will be reduced in short order. The group is practically a zero before very long.

The entire cast is competent, the story an interesting one, with the result that the film is mildly engrossing in an adult fashion.

Fair Warning!

"ALASKA."

If you would like to see a movie about claim jumpers in a small Alaskan town, featuring a cabaret singer named Roxie who is married to a drunken Shakespearean actor but in love with another man with at least three murders checked up against him, but who in turn is loved by her employer, a very crooked gent who feeds her husband whisky—go ahead, but don't say I didn't warn you.

It features quotes from "Hamlet," the can-can, a near lynching, a couple of fist fights, and, finally, a fine big fire. Justice prevails, and so does boredom.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 26.—Elizabeth Scott is blonde, not too beautiful, husky-voiced, and she can act. She was certainly a smoothie in a scene with Bob Cummings in "You Came Along." They were working in a set of the Mission Inn at Riverside, one of the most historic places in all California. This is the first time it has been used on the screen. The first time you walk thru the chapel inside the inn, you say to yourself, "If I ever marry, I'd like to have the wedding here." Well, Cummings is the only actor I know who fulfilled that wish. . . . Betty Hutton finally got around to Steve Crane and vice versa. Steve's the luckiest man in town, finding a bankroll to buy Lucey's, which the meat shortage seems to have passed by. Why, you can get the most succulent slice of A-A heifer there. . . . New title for Van Johnson from a fan: "The Ersatz Gable."

The Boston Bounce.

Sonny Tufts' mother hails from Boston. Such pep and enthusiasm! She tells Sonny if he'd go with her by bus, she'd show him the town he's living in. She went to see Ruth Draper at Ebell the other night, and waited with about 20 other ladies, not one of 'em under 50. The bus came along, and the driver said, "Hop in, girls!" She said "I nearly broke my neck getting up those three steps. I just wanted to show him how much I appreciated the compliment." She described the difference between Sonny and another son, David—when Sonny arrives at South station, Boston, the whole town knows it. David can be in the house four hours before even she knows he's arrived. . . . Monk's cloth is so difficult to get these days that Mervyn Leroy bought some old castoff drapes from Mike Romanoff which will be used in costumes for "The Robe."

Millions Have Seen 'Em.

Cheever Cowdin never said a truer word than when he declared American films will have more fans at the war's end than they've ever had before in the history of the industry. . . . Raymond Chandler, who wrote "The Big Sleep," is now doing his first screen original, "The Blue Dahlia." He tells me 25 years ago he lived at top of Angels' Flight here and wrote of far-off places he'd never seen and hasn't seen yet. He was lonely. Now he writes of friends and neighbors. He has been happily married for 21 years, but has no children. Said he, "I'd pity any one with a disposition like mine. When I'm in a mood, I chew scenery or carpets." You wouldn't believe it—he's so mild-mannered. He looked at me and said, "Well, I didn't expect you to look as you do, either. You're not fat, nor too old." We had a grand time. . . . Jules Levey has Herbert Biberman as associate producer on "Homesteaders" with Randolph Scott.

Another Band Leader.

Rudy Vallee has signed for "Tars and Spars," at Columbia. . . . Joan Davis and Jack Haley do a number in "George White's Scandals" called "Who Killed Vaudeville?" They ought to know. In this, Joan is shot from a cannon. . . . The Gettysburg museum asked for a copy of Lum and Abner's Christmas air script, which they've done since 1933. They sent the original. . . . I ran into a Metro pal who was hopping mad. She spilled this. Ever since the strike, offices have been dirty because all the janitors were called out. If workers start swinging a broom, they're called scabs and probably will get sugar dumped in their gasoline tanks. This fair maiden ran into Lulu, a colored maid who's been at Metro for years. Said Lulu, "Three of us have been allowed by the head of the union to clean out offices in the executive building only."

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

The Unknown Quantity.

A few weeks ago a girl got a job for which there were several applications. It's a desirable position, with opportunity and scope, one of those fortunate breaks for which many a white collar girl is waiting.

Most of the applicants had excellent experience. Probably more than one is puzzled as to why she did not win the prized position. What they may never know is that the girl who landed it had all their qualifications plus enthusiasm.

It was the enthusiasm that did it.

Too bad, isn't it, we can't always know why we fail to get a job! Rarely does the employer have time, or inclination, to point out discrepancies, yet the course of our lives might be changed if we could but see ourselves as he sees us.

The one determining factor that decides "We'll hire her—and not her"—that is the unknown quantity in our business lives. If we could discover it we might have the latchkey to success in the palm of our hands.

Think Nothing of It.

In one of my contributions the other day I addressed you as "Dear Elsie" instead of "Dear Ruth." Please excuse it. You see, we have a WCG in our office by the name of Elsie and I must have been thinking about her . . . you know how it is . . . spring in the air and all that sort of thing. . . .

THE SHADOW.

Keeping 'Em Posted.

Bernice Koller, in touch with 75 service men and women from the freight traffic department of the Rock Island railroad, keeps them posted as to the goings-on of the white collar girls, as you can see by this paragraph from her latest friendly letter to the boys and girls in uniform:

"Today is beautiful. The girl with the lovely voice who knows all about the weather and tells us about it for a nickel said the temperature will reach 75. As I sauntered down La Salle st. at noon my attention was attracted to a group of people looking into the areaway between the Board of Trade and the building which houses Mrs. Snyder's shop. My editorial nose [polite for nosiness] caused me to stop and what do you think I saw! There in the shadow of the Board of Trade, six or eight white collar girls — those career women on whom the fate of business rests — probably none of them over 17 years old — were jumping rope! Shades of Ceres! 'Tis well she stands in aloof dignity looking north, for if she were to witness this performance she certainly would swoon!"

On Second Thought.

I suppose you have to get used to her line,
But what would have happened to thee and me
In English A and English B
If we had written like Gertrude
Stein!

THE BOSS.

Beauty and the Beast.

Who says a receptionist is not "as brainy as she is beautiful" if she got a gentleman caller—a wolf—to change her typewriter ribbon for her. She has all the brains she needs!

Straighten Up; Right Posture Is Important

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

As the old sages said, back in the days before bobby socks and Harry James: As the twig is bent, so grows the tree. And that's a smart thought to mull over some time when you're slouched in an armchair at home listening to the radio, hunched over a book in study hall, or just drooping along the street on your way home from school. Posture, it is said, is an indication of what one thinks of one's self, so, unless you're a guy or gal who thinks himself strictly an off-the-cob character—come out of that curve!

For good posture, you must feel something important about yourself. You must feel that you are attractive to look at, that you have somewhere interesting to go, or that you have an important job to do. Or, you might just feel that life is a rather wonderful business, and that feeling is enought to make any one throw his shoulders back.

For good posture you must learn to be relaxed and alert at the same time. Just for practice put your back flat against the wall, with heels, hips, shoulders, and head touching the flat wall. Then walk away. You may feel stiff and affected at first, but right there you have perfect walking posture.

You've been taught table manners ever since you were knee-high to a napkin ring, and because posture is part of those manners, don't forget it when you're face to face with the next lunch hour. Sit erect, feet on the floor, and elbows off the table; bring the food off the plate up to your mouth with no stooped-over, halfway compromise. [And you'd be surprised how many smooth fellows and gals forget those table techniques.]

For gals only, remember posture particularly when you are in school, restaurants, street cars, and other public places. When skirts are short, legs are long, and gals are absent minded, the result can be both undignified and unattractive.

Your appearance, impressions, and even your health can depend on it, so keep your posture on your mind. From now on your'e going "straight."

Thru the Looking Glass

Soap novelties always delight children, and the unfailing pleasure they get out of playing with them, in the tub or out, makes them ideal Easter presents.

We look forward to hunting up soap toys, and this year have come across three which should satisfy any child.

The first is a trio of plump bunnies nestled in soft, green "grass." They look as contented as can be, and the gay little box which holds them is colorful and bright.

The second novelty is another trio, three busy looking ducklings, paddling along single file in a cardboard lake. They're a treat to the eye with their snowy white bodies, yellow bills and bright blue eyes. The child who receives them won't have to be coaxed into the bathtub, if he can take them along to entertain him.

A fat rabbit with wonderful, long ears is another soap toy we liked. He's sitting up on his hind legs, gnawing on a carrot almost as big as himself. The bright orange and green of the vegetable make a startling contrast to his own dazzling whiteness. He's big enough to provide many good soapings and will last long after the Easter bunny has departed.

All these novelties are made of fine quality soap, pure and gentle enough to use on a child's skin. They're not expensive and are appropriate and useful gifts to give to all the youngsters on your shopping list.

And speaking of soaps, don't forget that grown-up girls like to receive a cake or two of fancy, sweet-scented soap. We won't be specific here about the various ones we saw when we were soap shopping, but you'll find a wide selection of them in all sizes, colors, and shapes and fragrances on the counters in any of the department stores.

LLOYD GEORGE, FORMER PREMIER OF BRITAIN, DIES

Epithets such as the "dirty little Welsh solicitor" were used against him when he braved the flood of popular appeal, such as in the days of the Boer war, when he was outspokenly pro-Boer. Up to 1914 Conservatives called him "the evil genius of England, leading the country to ruin."

But when he became prime minister Dec. 6, 1916, succeeding Herbert Asquith, he began to be known as the "Welsh wizard" as he led England from dark days to victory. After 1918 he often was called "the man who won the war," but his popularity went into eclipse and finally he was succeeded as prime minister in 1922 by Andrew Bonar Law and, on the latter's death, by Stanley Baldwin.

"Too Late or Too Little."

Altho he took no official part in the present war, he denounced politically and morally the policy of appeasement and the practice of inadequacy in the prosecution of the war in phrases that were destined to become historic.

On March 13, 1940, after the first Finnish-Russian war, when commons was embroiled in debate over the failure to give large scale aid to the Finns, Lloyd George rose and declared:

"It is the old trouble—too late. Too late for Czechoslovakia. Too late for Poland. Certainly too late for Finland.

What he said was credited with helping to force Prime Minister Chamberlain's hand. Soon afterward the government fell, yielding to Churchill, a man as stubborn, as courageous and more eloquent than the little Welshman.

Born in Manchester.

Lloyd George was born at Manchester, England, Jan. 17, 1863, of Welsh parents. He went to school in the village of Llanystumdwy and afterward received private instruction. Later he became a student with a law firm in the little Welsh village where his uncle resided. In 1888 he married Miss Margaret Owen of Mynyddednyfed, Criccieth, Wales.

Lloyd George's national career really began in 1908 when Asquith became prime minister of England, and the little Welshman, who had been a Liberal member of parliament representing Carnarvon for 18 years, entered the cabinet as chancellor of the exchequer.

When England was plunged into the first World war the nation began to hunt a leader to win the war. In 1916, at a period as grave and dark as any in the history of England, there appeared this man. It was David Lloyd George.

Lloyd George turned the industries of Great Britain into a munitions factory, raised an army of 5,500,000 soldiers and 5,000,000 war workers, provided for the building of 4,000,000 tons of shipping, transformed the big estates into truck gardens, and enforced conscription on a proud and free people.

Became Premier in 1916.

Having succeeded in this tremendous task, it was only logical that Lloyd George should be chosen to succeed Lord Kitchener as secretary of state for war when the hero of Khartoum was lost at sea. He had completed only one important task in his new office—that of organizing with Eric Geddes the railway system behind the British armies in France—when he was called to become prime minister.

Lloyd George was adamant against German overtures for a premature peace in 1917 and demanded "reparation, restitution, and guarantees" to secure a cessation of hostilities. Then the friend of the United States, he hailed the entry of America into the war as a red letter day in the history of the Anglo-Saxon race.

As British prime minister Lloyd George took as notable a part in the conclusion of peace as he had taken in the prosecution of the war. He was present when the armistice negotiations were concluded at Versailles and later headed the British delegation at Paris when the peace conference assembled.

Negotiates Irish Treaty.

The Irish question continued to occupy the anxious attention of Lloyd George even during the peace conference, when, for the first time, the Sinn Fein element made a determined effort to obtain the recognition of the independence of Ireland as part of the peacemakers' policy of "self-determination." Finally in 1921 he negotiated the treaty which created the Irish Free State.

In the fall of 1923 Lloyd George made a tour of the United States and Canada, accompanied by his wife and a daughter. He visited Chicago on this trip.

When the Labor party came into power and Ramsay MacDonald became prime minister Lloyd George was one of the new government's most effective critics until 1929, when he agreed to a truce to help keep the MacDonald government in office, thus preventing the Conservatives from assuming power.

Shorn of Power.

At the same time MacDonald formed the national crisis cabinet Lloyd George was shorn of power, but not of his voice and ability to frame bitter invectives.

Serious illness attacked Lloyd George in July, 1931, and he submitted to an operation for removal of the cause of haimaturia—urinary bleeding. He was not well enough to make a vigorous campaign in the fall.

Before resuming his seat in early 1932 the elderly statesman launched his fiercest tirade on the government. In April his book, "The Truth About Reparations and War Debts," was published in the United States. In it he said, "There is no use shutting one's eyes to the fact that the majority of the war debts are now bad. Payment depended on the yield of German reparations. That source is now pumped dry."

In April, 1939, Lloyd George began his 50th year in the house of commons. Five months later he heard his king read a declaration that Great Britain was again at war with Germany.

Early in the war Lloyd George counseled the government not to be hasty in rejecting German peace offers, holding Britain should accept an opportunity for a negotiated peace. His efforts were in vain.

In January, 1941, tragedy struck deep into his life with the death of his wife, with whom he said he had "lived in perfect harmony for 50 years."

In 1943 the 80 year old political veteran emerged from semi-retirement to surprise the world by his marriage to Miss Stevenson. He once wrote that he had shared more of his life with her than with any one except his first wife.

"This truth—so well dramatized in some of our greatest plays—is always a basis of happiness in real life. This is beautifully shown in the tender and helpful story 'Young Girl in Blue' in the current TRUE STORY. It seems to me every American girl and her mother could profit by reading it."

Fight Decisions

LAST NIGHT.

At Philadelphia—Ike Williams knocked out Dorsey Lay [3]; Freddy Dawson stopped Ernie Petrone [1]; Jimmy Collins beat Russ Rega [6]; Archie Wilmer beat Pat Demers [8].

At Washington, D. C.—Sammy Daniels knocked out Tommy Mollis [3]; Joe Gannon beat Jerome Fratt [8]; Frank Sweeney beat Okie Greer [8]; Bill Banks beat Billy Morris [8].

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Jack Lamotta convinced 11,115 spectators that George Costner lacks the experience necessary to cope with topnotch opponents when he floored the Cincinnati welterweight for the count in the sixth round of a scheduled 10 round bout in Chicago Stadium last night.

It was the second straight knockout suffered by Costner, who prior to his first round setback at the hands of Ray [Sugar] Robinson in the west side arena last month had compiled a chain of 23 straight victories, 22 by knockouts.

Costner Changes Tactics.

Costner started fast but Lamotta took a lot of fight out of him with that first knockdown, from which George bounced right up without taking a count. George apparently was unhurt, because shortly thereafter he retaliated with a series of blows to the head which brought the crowd to its feet.

Lamotta continued to pile up points in the second round, but in the third Costner changed his tactics and went on the defensive except for brief flurries and annoying left jabs to the nose. Lamotta became furious when unable to catch the fleet footed Ohioan and waved his Negro opponent to "come on and fight."

Costner resumed his cautious maneuvers in the fourth, but started to tire from Lamotta's pounding and his own efforts in the fifth. Jack's punching power was almost negligible in that round. In the sixth, however, Lamotta's wallops were murderous, especially since Costner slowed down to a walk and was an easy target.

Takes Count on One Knee.

The beginning of the end was seen when Lamotta dropped Costner for a nine count about midway in the sixth. George took the count on one knee, blinking his left eye, which had been shut by a right which preceded the second knockdown. When he arose Costner gave indication he had enough but before one could say "Jack Robinson" Lamotta rushed toward his stricken foe and drove a left to the jaw which sent him crashing to the floor. Referee Walter Brightmore completed his toll at 2 minutes 21 seconds.

The attendance included 1,000 service men guests of the promoters. Staff Sgt. Joe Louis, world heavyweight champion, and Ray Robinson also attended, the latter in hopes of meeting Lamotta in a fifth contest in the Stadium May 11. Gross receipts were $45,485.

Lamotta's Brother Wins, Too.

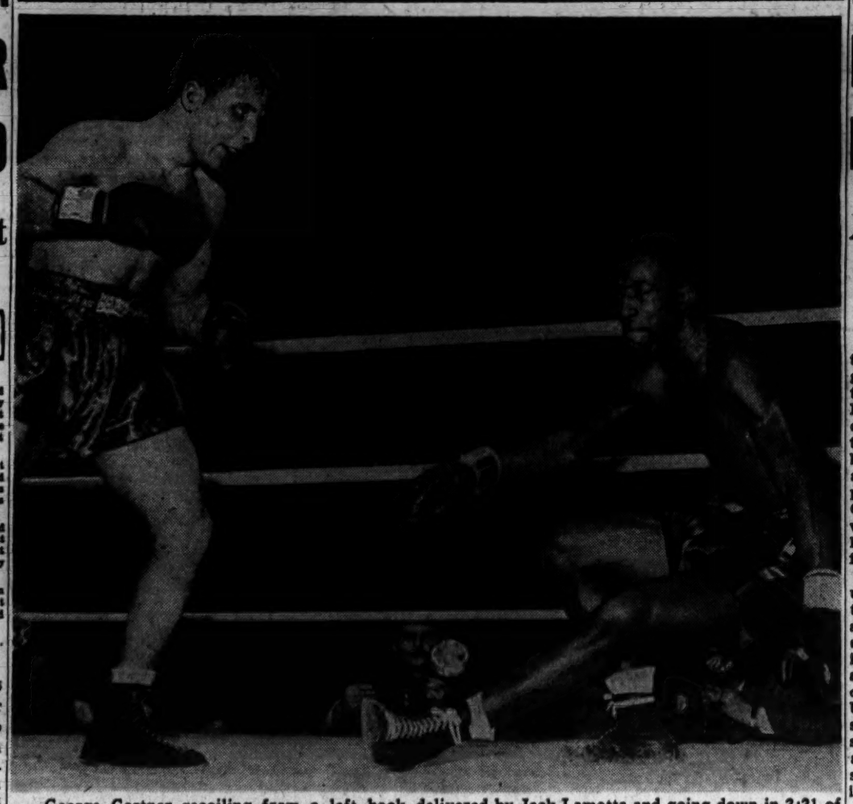
In other bouts Johnny Bratton, 1944 City Golden Gloves lightweight titleholder, defeated Patsy Spataro of New York in eight rounds; Bill Parsons, Danville, Ill., welterweight, beat Frankie Abrams of Detroit, also in eight, and Joey Lamotta, welterweight brother of Jack, knocked out Al Jackson in one round.

COSTNER GOING DOWN FOR THIRD AND FINAL TIME



George Costner recoiling from a left hook delivered by Jack Lamotta and going down in 2:21 of the sixth round of a scheduled 10 round bout in the Stadium last night. Lamotta had previously scored two knockdowns with that same left jab. It was the second straight knockout suffered in the Stadium by Costner, the other having been scored by Ray (Sugar) Robinson. HAYNES DESERTS HOLDOUT RANKS OF WHITE SOX

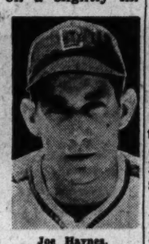
BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Terre Haute, Ind., March 26.—The White Sox took on a slightly improved major league complexion today when James Dykes' party was augmented by the arrival of Joe Haynes, the first of the four holdout pitchers to abandon his recalcitrant role.



Joe Haynes.

Haynes, who like the three unsigned absentees is going to be needed if Dykes is to succeed in fighting his way out of the seventh place straitjacket in the coming race, came to terms several days ago and thought he would be on hand 24 hours after being assured the pay he demanded, with the customary discount for compromise, but his delay caused no concern.

The gentleman has been working out with his former Senator mates in College Park, Md., so is just about ready to abandon common training camp throwing for mound trickery.

Pitchers Take Regular Turns.

Boss Dykes intended to present a camp game today to make up for yesterday's default to wet grounds, but after the usual conditioning preliminaries got under way he decided not to break it up for six innings of competition. Part of his change could be attributed to another dose of California weather. Another part was due to the fact that he became engrossed by the appearance of his experienced pitchers, Haynes excepted, in mound turns during batting practice and apparently enjoying themselves. The batters also were having fun.

Thornton Lee was among those who did a 15 minute stretch of tossing to the bat swingers. The 37 year old veteran convinced himself, as well as others, that the soreness that plagued his left forearm for a few days had vanished.

Doing similar turns were Lee Ross, John Johnson, and Ed Lopat. The batters continued to draw amusement from other pitchers, but the latter are fellows Dykes merely hopes will be able to lend aid after April 17.

Lopat is especially interesting for Dykes at this time because of the April 17 date in Cleveland. The

Grimm Gives Cubs Lessons on Being Foxy

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

French Lick, Ind., March 26.—Life with the Cubs consisted in the morning of doting on the magnolia blossoms, frozen out when the team was here in 1943 and 1944, but never more gorgeous than now. Having lived with nature in the morning the athletes were inspired to great diligence in the afternoon drill, which was devoted to practicing strategems. Manager Charley Grimm wants his boys to be more like foxes than they were last season.

If the National league season were to open tomorrow the Cubs probably would be best prepared of all. As of this afternoon's roll call Skipper Grimm was in command of 23 athletes—nine pitchers, including all his big five; four catchers, including the best three-deep receiving staff in the league; seven infielders, and three outfielders.

Supplementing this list are several who have been given permission to linger in California to work under their own initiative rather than under the direction of their manager. This list includes two pitchers, one catcher, one infielder, and one outfielder.

Yes, Yes—But When?

Other than the foregoing California squad, there remains, with the Sunday reporting of Claude Passeau, only one major absentee—Bill Nicholson. Grimm today reiterated earlier statements that Bill had assured him he would be in right field on opening day. However, Charley added that he will feel comfortable when he sees the Maryland muscle marvel in the flesh. He says he has not been notified by the Chicago secrets department when Bill will get here.

Another absentee Charley would like to have seen here is Paul Erickson, but Charley apparently loses interest in Paul as the season nears. Paul is driving a milk truck in Chicago, it is said.

The next intraclub game will be played Wednesday and it will be the first nine inning encounter after three seven inning contests. The pitching will be done by Eddie Hanyzewski, who apparently has experienced a miraculous recovery from the sore arm that laid him low last season; Paul Derringer, who is in the best physical shape he has displayed in his three springs with the Cubs; George Hennessey, the personable tho slightly garrulous right hander, and Mack Stewart, a philosopher from way down south.

Reds' Mystery Deepens.

The hotel manager here, as well as the Cub officials, still say they haven't heard anything of the plan of the Cincinnati Reds to move in on them for a week, beginning April 2, as announced by the Reds. However, the lady who bosses the hotel linen room said a little birdie had told her that additional ball players were about to swoop down on the place. She has the sheets, quilts, and towels ready, she says, tho she hasn't been apprised of the date of arrival. It is believed the Reds may come in disguised as wealthy sportsmen, here to take the waters.

Katherine Winthrop Wins in Indoor Tennis Play

Brookline, Mass., March 26 (AP).—Katherine Winthrop of near-by Hamilton, started defense of her women's national indoor singles tennis championship today by defeating Mrs. Robert Elwell of Dedham, 6-2, 6-4. Mrs. Helen Pedersen Rihbany of New York advanced to the third round by eliminating Jean Pipes of Wellesley, 6-1, 6-0.

IRISH BATTLER PLEASES EAST'S GLOVES COACHES

BY BILL MURTHA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Bear Mountain, N. Y., March 26.—The New York Golden Gloves coaches have been trying to keep their enthusiasm in check but they bubbled over today after watching Eddie Murphy, the New York lightweight champion box three rounds with two teammates, Rafael Reveron and Esme Springer, a pair of featherweights.

Murphy has been held under wraps since the squad started training for the annual Intercity bouts with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S team April 4 in the Chicago Stadium. The coaches felt he needed little work after his arduous grind thru the New York tournament and the eastern Tournament of Champions. Murphy is a skinny fellow who relies on his heart more than on bone and muscle and the trainers saw no point in putting him thru too strenuous a routine to get ready for the Chicago bouts. They know whoever draws Murphy will have a fight on his hands.

Wants to Fight—and Does!

Eddie had other ideas, however. After he had become thoroly bored with punching the bag and skipping rope he laid down an ultimatum that he'd either box or go home. The coaches agreed that he should go a few rounds with the featherweights to sharpen up his timing and speed but after they turned him loose they wished they hadn't given in to him.

The lanky Bronx boy unleashed all his energy on the hapless featherers and for a few minutes there was some doubt about New York even having a 126 pound delegation to go to Chicago for the Intercity show.

Taking on Reveron, the eastern 126 pound champion and Springer, an alternate candidate in turn, Murphy chased them around and almost out of the ring. Both Reveron and Springer are pretty good lads in their class but Murphy's height and weight advantage were too much for them.

Other Lightweights Look Good.

Murphy wasn't the only New York squad member who sparkled in today's workout. The coaches still are trying to make up their minds about the alternate lightweight who'll fight behind Murphy and after watching Al Highers and Leon Johnson go two rounds with each other they were more unsettled than ever.

It was as even a contest as is possible with the big training mitts. Highers is smoother, jabs better, and is faster, but Johnson compels attention because of a potent right hand. The eastern coaches have nothing else to compare the pair on, since both fought Murphy in previous meets, Highers in the eastern Tournament of Champions and Johnson in the city finals and Mur-

LEATHER FLIES IN CHICAGOANS' INTERCITY DRILL

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The young men who currently are training in the Illinois Athletic club gymnasium for the 18th annual Intercity Golden Gloves struggle with New York in the Chicago Stadium on April 4 yesterday decided that they have done enough preliminary boxing for the big show. Footwork and jabbing were supplanted by punches ticketed for keeps as the Chicagoans made the tenth floor walls and ceilings resound with a leather bombardment that endured for more than an hour.

Several factors may have contributed to the swift transformation of the tempo in the ring. The floor and mat work with which the Chicago team has been whipping itself into condition appeared incidental as the boys were given their first opportunity to go two full rounds. Until yesterday, they had been restrained to a single three minute spell with gloves, all of their other activities being confined to rope skipping, shadow boxing, calisthenics and pummeling the heavy bags.

Texans on Scene.

Another reason for the stepped-up complexion of the training program was the arrival of four fellows who had proven themselves in the Chicago championship finals on March 9. Two of these—Corp. Adolfo Quijano of Muroc, Cal., and Ray Spurlock, the Kansas City middleweight—arrived Sunday. Yesterday brought the Fort Worth Star-Telegram's welterweight champion, Gilbert Garcia, and his Texas pal, Corp. Tom Attra, 1942 light heavyweight victor and runner-up to Corp. Quijano in the same division this year. Garcia won the title in the Chicago finals.

Quijano, Attra, and Spurlock, all obviously eager to prove their right to roles in the big battle against New York, were not denied that opportunity by Head Coach John Behr and his associates—Fred Caserio, Issy Kline, Dick Fitzpatrick, Pop Howard, and Eddie Nichols.

Quijano, Attra at It Again.

Quijano and Attra, who between them produced one of the most stirring finals in Golden Gloves history, were tossed into the training ring as soon as they landed, and showed their gratitude for a renewal of acquaintances by lambasting each other for the full three minutes allotted them.

Spurlock, who had announced himself with a speedy single round on Sunday, was given his first double header assignment yesterday. The Missouri blond, who was a member of the squad which trimmed New York, 9 to 7, last year, found himself up against Bob Cotton, lanky Negro middleweight from Indianapolis. Cotton didn't yield a whit to Spurlock in their round, but Ray found himself an even rougher opponent in Dave Colquitt, Gary 175 pounder, in his second three minute test.

For nearly three minutes, Spurlock and Colquitt gave one of the most spirited training rounds ever seen in a Golden Gloves practice round. From the opening bell, Ray and Dave hurled everything in the punching book at each other with such intensity that Coach Kline, the third man in the ring, finally called a halt to the torrid going.

Garcia Has Hand Injury.

Garcia, who landed with Corp. Attra yesterday morning, was not permitted to box after an examination revealed a contusion on his right hand. The 19 year old Houston shipyard worker was promised, however, that he will be given his chance within a few days, and regretfully submitted to light treatments.

The squad which is preparing to face one of New York's most talented ensembles in years will be complete by Saturday. Tomorrow Pvt. Bob Wilson, the Texas born welterweight who was runner-up to Garcia in the Chicago 147 pound final, will report from the army air corps base at Sioux Falls, S. D.

Another flying soldier, Corp. William Zuke of the Lincoln, Neb., air field, will arrive Saturday. Zuke, a heavyweight who had fought for Minneapolis three years ago, proved himself an outstanding puncher in the Chicago finals.

MIKAN SCORES 34 IN ROUT OF BOWLING GREEN

Giant Sets 3 Marks; So Does Team.

New York, March 26 (AP).—With Big George Mikan scoring 34 points, De Paul of Chicago tonight won the national invitation basketball tournament in Madison Square Garden, whipping Bowling Green of Ohio, 71 to 54, before 18,166 fans.

The Chicago team, held scoreless for the first five minutes as its opponents from the small college in Ohio made 11 points, swept into the lead at the 15 minute mark and never was headed again. Mikan set three individual records and De Paul three team marks. George scored 120 points in the meet, 49 field goals, and 22 free throws for new standards.

The team marks established for three games were a total of 244 points, 100 field goals, and 44 free throws. The attendance also boosted the turnout for four nights to 72,622, likewise a new top.

Mikan Named No. 1 Player.

Mikan, who set a garden scoring mark of 53 points against Rhode Island State in the semi-finals, was slow getting started as the 6 foot 11 inch Don Otten paced Bowling Green into an early lead. But once the versatile Mikan found the answer to Otten's height he started clicking. At the same time De Paul checked the Ohioans all over the floor with the result the Chicagoans led at the half, 30 to 22.

For his performance in all three games Mikan was named the outstanding player of the tournament.

Don Whitehead, who paced Bowling Green with 17 points, and Johnny Payak kept the Falcons in the running during the early part of the second half, but they never were able to get closer than five points. With 10 minutes to play De Paul lost Jack Allen on fouls, and for a few minutes it looked as if Bowling Green would make a battle of it.

Turn Game Into Bout.

But with eight minutes remaining Otten was charged with his fifth personal, and with him went Bowling Green's strength off the boards. Gene Stump and Whitey Kachan joined Mikan in a parade to the basket as the Chicagoans scored much as they pleased in the closing minutes.

St. John's beat Rhode Island State, 64 to 57, for third place.

De Paul qualified to play the winner of tomorrow night's National Collegiate Athletic association finals in which Oklahoma A. & M. and New York university will play. This special game will be played Thursday in Madison Square Garden.

NO MAJOR CODE CHANGES LIKELY IN BASKETBALL

Rules Committee to Act on Suggestions Today.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Out of a stack of proposals, formal and informal, for changes in the basketball rules an indication was seen today that no major revisions will be made in the playing code for next season.

The national basketball committee, meeting in conjunction with the final rounds of the National Collegiate A. A. and New York invitation tournaments, devoted today's session to listening to various reports and suggestions. The proposals which have the strongest backing will be considered for adoption tomorrow.

Most important of these appeared to be changes designed to prevent abuses of the unlimited substitution rule, to relieve congestion in the small area immediately in front of the backboard, and to provide a standard set of signals for officials.

Coaches Honor Olsen.

Meanwhile the National Association of Basketball Coaches made its annual award to the coach who has made the greatest contribution to basketball during the last year to Harold G. Olsen of Ohio State, chairman of the N. C. A. A. tournament committee since 1939, and issued a statement on the coaches' attitude toward gambling.

The coaches, the statement said, recognize and accept their responsibilities with respect to supervision of their players. They also feel that games away from the college campuses have promoted wholesome interests and have contributed in general to the improvement of basketball.

Speaking at a meeting of the Basketball Writers' association, James St. Clair of Southern Methodist, chairman of the rules committee, pointed out that the changes made a year ago had been favorably received because they had been studied and experimented with before adoption.

Officials Make Suggestions.

Some suggestions were offered by Dave Walsh of the Eastern Intercollegiate association, who said that officials do not like the 30 second substitution rule, which cancels a time out charged against a team when a substitute is sent in within 30 seconds; that they consider the technical foul a too severe penalty because a team gets both a free throw and possession of the ball; that they would like to speed up the game by designating the player to take the ball on an out of bounds play, and that they do not like the responsibility of "diagnosing" an injury and halting play when a player apparently is hurt.

All-Star Youth Fives Clash at Lane Tonight

The ninth annual basketball game between all-star squads from the B'nai B'rith Youth organization and the Catholic Youth organization will be played tonight in Lane Tech gymnasium, Addison and Western av.

An opening game at 8 o'clock will bring together St. Andrew's parish, winner of the C. Y. O. junior title, and Lawrence Restaurant, 1945 B. B. Y. O. junior titleholder. The Lawrence quintet is composed of former prep players who competed with north section teams.

The C. Y. O. all-stars are Tom and Jim Hoffman, Casey Palace, Joe Megacz, Lou and Bob Werderitch, Jim Zeravich, Joe Prawdzik, Pete Smicklas, and Bob Cisco. The group will be coached by Charles [Feed] Murphy, while the B. B. Y. O. stars will be handled by Chuck Goldstein and Vic Mann. The B. B. Y. O. squad consists of Norm Ament, Whitey Siegel, Dick Karzen, Buddy Burrows, Lee Furie, Chuck Allen, Lawry Goldstein, Al Leavitt, and Gene Schanbaum.

The C. Y. O. has won seven of the eight games, the B. B. Y. O. finishing on top in 1941. The winner takes possession of the Lifschultz memorial trophy for one year. The trophy was donated by one of the originators of the B'nai B'rith Youth organization, Maj. Sam Lifschultz, in honor of his father.

The junior series is a bit closer from the victory standpoint, with the B. B. Y. O. having an edge with four victories in seven games. Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, sponsor of the C. Y. O., will be among the guests of honor.

phy had about the same margin over the two of them—an eyelash.

Highers even managed to knock Murphy down twice, but tired in the last half of the bout and was almost thru when the final gong rang. Johnson, on the other hand, finished strongly and might have whipped Murphy if he hadn't inexplicably let him get away when he had him on the ropes and going in their last round.

In another set-to La Verne Roach, the welterweight champion, spotted Dominic Modafferi, an alternate middleweight candidate, 12 pounds and continued to demonstrate his innate class. Modafferi floored the 160 pound champ, Howard Brodt, in a workout yesterday, but he barely laid a glove on Roach today. The young Texan from the Cherry Point, N. C., marine air base threw too much leather and in too guileful a manner to permit the New York lad to get himself untracked.

The New Yorkers enjoyed the mob that watched them work out at the resort on Sunday, but were just as happy to get back to the week-day normalcy of this mountain retreat today.

Anglers Heed Spring Call of Lake Country

BY BOB BECKER.

Hundreds of pounds of crappies and bluegills now are being taken every week from northern Illinois lakes by fly rod and minnow fishermen and then routed for the frying pan, for it's spring in the lake country, the fish are striking, and fishermen are on the job.

A few days ago when we checked the fishing front around the southern end of Pistakee lake, Round lake, and other spots where the bluegills and crappies are striking flies, we found men, women, and children equipped with all types of fishing tackle standing on the banks of the narrow canals or ditches which lead into the various lakes and everybody was after a mess of panfish.

"Ditch" Needs a Cleanup.

The "Ditch," the famous little creek which runs into the southern end of Pistakee lake, was the most popular fishing spot we saw on our visit to the lake region. It also was the most uninviting casting place at which we looked, for the banks are lined with dead garfish and an occasional bluegill. The place obviously needs a cleanup. There were 20 cars parked along the road when we got there. But the fishing was so poor that most of the fly fishermen were disgusted. A northeast wind blowing into the mouth of the creek was enough to discourage both the fish and fly rod experts.

But four fishermen from La Grange standing on the bank of a dead end canal about a mile from the "Ditch" were having fun, for this area of water was loaded with bluegills which took flies.

Mayor Is High Man.

From the "Ditch" [which is on the road leading west out of the village of Long Lake] we went to Round lake. Here the crappies were hitting well and the water was clean and free of fish killed by the winter ice. Mayor H. H. Rostad of Round Lake was high man here with a string of 13 crappies dangling in the water, all taken on minnows. He was still after 'em when we left. Several fly fishermen also were on the bank attempting to lure the crappies with wet flies.

This early spring fishing for crappies and bluegills not only will produce some food for the pan when the weather is right and the fish are in a hittin' mood, but it also is a swell chance for fishermen just learning to handle a fly rod to get some practice.

HOPPE ADDS FIVE POINTS TO LEAD OVER COCHRAN

Philadelphia, Pa., March 26 (AP).—Challenger Willie Hoppe today added five points to his lead over Welker Cochran, three cushion billiard champion, in the first of their six blocks to be played here as part of their transcontinental world championship competition.

Hoppe defeated Cochran, 60 to 55, to take a 892 to 871 lead with 17 blocks completed. Hoppe trailed, 8 to 2, after four innings and fought an uphill battle until he passed the champion in the 18th.

MICKEY OWEN TO JOIN DODGERS, HE TELLS DUROCHER

Bear Mountain, N. Y., March 26 (AP).—Mickey Owen, who recently sold his farm implements and stock with the announced intention of entering the service, telephoned Manager Leo Durocher today that he was preparing to rejoin the Brooklyn Dodgers.

He gave no indication how long he expects to remain with the club, but his presence, even tho temporary, will bolster the catching department, where a rookie, Stan Andrews, now is the No. 1 man.

Morris Aderholt, infielder, received notice from Washington that he had been placed in 4-F again.

CARDS WORK AT HOME.

St. Louis, Mo., March 26 (AP).—On dry ground for the first time since opening training a week ago, the St. Louis Cardinals worked out three hours today under Manager Billy Southworth who was getting his first glimpse of his 1945 squad.

The Cards went thru their first hitting practice of the year under a blazing sun at Sportsman's park. Wet grounds had limited previous workouts to pepper games and limbering up exercises.

KRAMER STILL ABSENT.

Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 26 (AP).—Jack Kramer who last year pitched the only one hit game in the American league, remained the St. Louis Browns' lone holdout today.

Kramer who is working out in St. Louis, said he and the club aren't too far apart on salary, but added "they have been ignoring me for over a week. I'm just waiting to see what will happen."

RIDDLE LOST TO REDS.

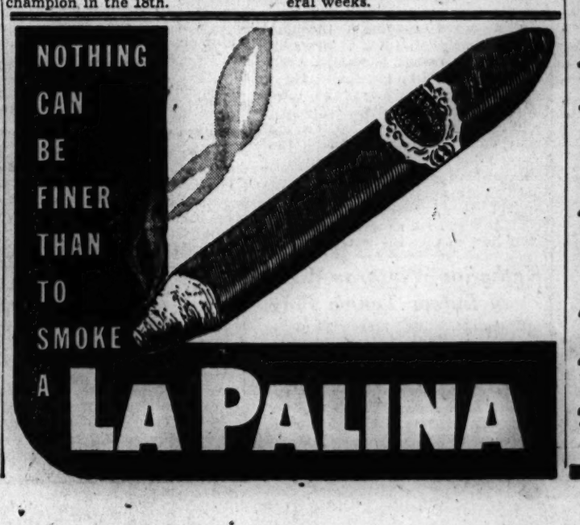
Bloomington, Ind., March 26 (AP).—Elmer Riddle, who used to be a big name on the Cincinnati Red baseball team, today informed Manager Bill McKechnie that he will remain on his recreational director's job in Columbus, Ga. Of course, the 21 game winner of 1943 did little pitching for the Reds last year as a bad shoulder held him to a won and lost record of 2 and 2.

Morning and afternoon workouts were on the bill today. Al Lakeman, a graduate of the Cincinnati sandlots and the best prospect for the catching position, thrilled onlookers with long distance clouting.

INJURIES FORCE PHELPS OUT OF DRAKE RELAYS

Champaign, Ill., March 26 [Special].—Bob Phelps of Illinois, one of the nation's leading college pole vaulters, will not be able to accompany his team to the Drake relays April 28, Coach Leo Johnson said today. Phelps may be out for the season and, at best, will see his next competition in the Big Ten outdoor meet here May 26.

Phelps dislocated his elbow in a fall from 13 feet 10 inches at the Purdue relays last Saturday night. Phelps won the event at 13 feet 7⅝ inches. The elbow was placed in a cast at a Lafayette, Ind., hospital and will remain in the cast for several weeks.



Power Gone, Tigers Play for One Run

Skeeter Webb.

Evansville, Ind., March 26 (AP).—With their two top hitters of 1944 now wearing the uniform of Uncle Sam's navy, the Detroit Tigers hardly are as badly hit as it might seem.

Departure of Dick Wakefield, a .355 hitter, and Third Baseman Mike [Pinky] Higgins, admittedly the best clutch hitter of the club leaves the Tigers with a pair of gaping holes, but for Manager Steve O'Neill's money they're already as good as filled.

Webb to Be at Shortstop.

Acquisition of Jimmy [Skeeter] Webb from the Chicago White Sox, O'Neill's son-in-law and a slick fielding shortstop, and the shift of holdover Joe Hoover from short to third gives Detroit a first rate defensive infield with Eddie Mayo back at second and Rudy York on first. Backing up that quartet is Don Ross, utility man, who has played every infield position and also relieves in the outfield, and Carl McNabb, rookie second baseman.

O'Neill already has announced that Webb will be his starting shortstop. The slightly built veteran was no great shakes as a hitter but covered a lot of ground afield with the Sox. His batting average—a mere .211 with the Sox last year—is almost certain to improve with his move from Comiskey park, where batters are hitting into the wind nine days out of 10, according to the Skeeter.

Will Play for One Run.

Such an infield — Hoover, Webb, Mayo, and York—carries a mean batting average of only .243 from last season, which means, according to O'Neill, "We'll have to revise our whole attack and play for one run."

Higgins batted .297 with the Tigers last season and Wakefield .355 for his 78 games.

A minor leaguer who played every game of the 1944 season at third base for Buffalo, stockily built Bob Maier, is O'Neill's successor to Wakefield in left field. Maier has two good seasons of minor league outfielding back of him and hit .298 with the Bisons last year. Under current plans Maier would work with the veteran Roger [Doc] Cramer in center and Jim Outlaw in right.

Pitching Staff Powerful.

Detroit's pitching staff, best in the American league last season with an earned run average of 3.09, should be stouter than ever, with the durable pair of Paul [Dizzy] Trout and Hal Newhouser heading a corps of five capable starters.

The catching hardly could be improved, with level headed Bob Swift and 36 year old Paul Richards sharing the chore. Richards, in rare physical condition, will be playing his 20th season of organized baseball.

Resume Play for Stanley Cup Tonight

New York, March 26 (AP).—The Montreal Canadiens and the Detroit Red Wings were confident tonight they will even their semi-final series with the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Boston Bruins when the Stanley cup hockey play-offs are resumed tomorrow.

The Canadiens play in Toronto, where they won, 4 to 1, Saturday night to climb within two points of the Leafs in their eight point series. The Wings play at Boston, where they beat the Bruins, 3 to 2, Sunday night.

Dick Irvin, Canadien manager, said after Saturday's victory that the Leafs will be lucky to win another game. In their easy decision the canadiens looked more like the team that swept to victory during the regular season and two newcomers, Frank Stahan and Johnny Mahaffey, worked into the Montreal lineup smoothly. The Canadiens are defending Stanley cup champions.

A pep talk by Manager Jack Adams was credited for Detroit's victorious showing on Bruin ice. Adams reminded the players that an increased cash prize awaits the victors of the preliminary play-off round regardless of whether or not they win the coveted cup. Despite the fact that each is trailing in the fight for the finals, odds are about even that Detroit and Montreal will ultimately whip their opponents.

St. Rita High School Wins Practice Game, 6-5

St. Rita High school defeated Kelly, 6 to 5, in a seven inning practice game yesterday on Bryne field. The Ritans came up with five runs in the fourth inning to offset a home run by Ralph Pillot that produced three.

SENATORS BEAT BRAVES, 12 TO 5, IN EXHIBITION

Fort Belvoir, Va., March 26 (AP).—Four thousand soldiers today saw the Washington Senators score a 12 to 5 victory over the Boston Braves to even their interleague series at one victory each.

The American leaguers took the lead in the first inning when Fred Vaughn hit a home run with the bases loaded. Homers also were hit by George Binks of the Senators and Frank Drews and Tommy Holmes of the Braves.

Boston [N.L.&N.]	111	000	030	5	13	3

Batteries—Haefner, Pieretti, Rossi and Evans; Cardenal, Petty and Ulmsey.

GIANTS WIN, 9 TO 2.

Bainbridge, Md., March 26—(AP).—The New York Giants scored six runs in the first inning today and defeated Bainbridge naval training center, 9 to 2.

Ernie Lombardi hit a home run off Hugh East, with the bases loaded in the first inning.

The teams thus played even up in their serier tying the first, and the second going to Bainbridge. Score:

Batteries—Feldman, Emmerich, Matthewson and Lombardi; East, Caniglia, Plennig and Culp.

A'S BEATEN, 19-8.

Baltimore, Md., March 26 (AP).—The Curtis Bay coast guard Cutters blasted out five home runs today to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 19 to 8, in a seven inning exhibition baseball game.

The Cutters who lost, 14 to 13, in last Friday's game with the A's, trailed going after the second but unleashed a third inning seven run spree which gave them a winning margin.

Haynes Quits Holdout of Sox Pitchers

roly-poly left hander, who won 11 while losing 10 last season, is particularly effective against the Indians, hence a desire to have him ready. Bill Dietrich and Johnny Humphries also are expert Indian tamers, but they, like Orval Grove, haven't signed, so there is little chance for them to handle the opening day assignment. If Lopat doesn't draw it the job probably will be drawn by Lee, there being no other choice.

Dykes now has 29 pupils in his baseball school, but there isn't a first baseman in the lot as good as Coach Mule Haas, and the donkey insists it is too late in life to make a fresh start. Haas is meeting all the trains, hopeful of seeing Joe Orengo, the prospective first sacker until an improved article can be uncovered, drop off onto the depot platform.

The local firemen have threatened to bring out their nine tomorrow, and if they show up Dykes will accommodate them with four or five innings of competition.

Harry Grabiner, vice president and general manager of the Chicago White Sox, said yesterday the Detroit Tigers will join the White Sox in spring training in Terre Haute, Ind., April 7 and play a three game series there, April 8 thru 10. The Tigers now are practicing in Evansville, Ind.

The White Sox will break camp in time to start a four game city series with the Chicago Cubs in Chicago April 12.

NAME THREE TO MIDWEST LEAGUE PROTEST BOARD

Joe Witry, Chicago lawyer; Kyle Anderson, University of Chicago athletic coach, and Tibby Serri, president of the Newsboy's union, were named to the three man protest board which will rule on all disputes that may arise during the Midwest Baseball league's 1945 season, it was announced last night by Doug Minor, president. The members of the board, all former baseball players, were approved by the league's membership from a list of 17 eligibles submitted two weeks ago.

Mineralites Boost Lead in Windy City to 7 Games

The Mineralites last night won two out of three games from the Meister Braus to increase their Windy City league lead to seven games with only nine to go. The O'Keefe Brothers' coal quintet bowled a 3,035 series to take team honors and John Erben of the Vogel Brothers five totaled 726 to hose out Otto Mauge who rolled 704.

CHICAGO ROTARY COMBATS SHIFT OF MAIN OFFICE

Cite City's Vantages Over Denver, Colo.

A drive to defeat the campaign to move Rotary International's headquarters to Denver, Colo., from Chicago, birthplace and headquarters of the organization since it was founded in 1910, has been launched by the Chicago Rotary club.

Chesley R. Perry, president, said yesterday 12,000 Rotary leaders and many clubs are being circularized in an effort to overthrow the Denver bid.

It is expected, he said, that the proposal may be decided at the next meeting of Rotary International's board of 14 directors here May 23.

Call Chicago Logical Center.

"We believe Chicago is the logical place for International's headquarters," Perry said. "Its central location as the natural air travel headquarters of the world is sufficient argument alone. Besides that, as one of the world's biggest centers, it has the cultural, business, and other facilities to offer."

Perry pointed out that Rotary International has 5,000 clubs with a membership totaling 250,000 thruout the world.

Perry said that Chicago is one of the few cities equipped with facilities for printing Rotary magazines and other literature in the foreign languages required of its membership.

Cost Estimated at $600,000.

The organization's headquarters are now located on two floors of the Pure Oil building and are expanding rapidly, Perry explained.

The Denver proposal contemplates erection of a Rotary International building on the site of an abandoned cemetery in a residential section of Denver, but the site and construction costs would have to be paid for by the organization. It was estimated, Perry said, that it would cost $100,000 to move the offices to Denver. Cost of the Denver project, he said, has been roughly estimated at $600,000.

Reverse Seasonal Trend, Reports Show.

Employment in Illinois decreased 0.2 per cent between Jan. 15 and Feb. 15, altho wage disbursements were larger than in the preceding month, Robert L. Gordon, acting director of the Illinois department of labor, said yesterday. Both employment and pay rolls decreased in Chicago, but were higher in the Chicago suburban area.

The combined reports of 6,722 establishments showed the trend was contrary to January-February seasonal expectations, Gordon said. Manufacturing establishments had 0.3 per cent fewer workers, but paid out 0.2 per cent more in wages. Averages of the last 22 years have been increases of 1.5 per cent in employment and 3.3 per cent in pay rolls.

Fall Second Consecutive Month.

In Chicago, employment and pay rolls fell for the second consecutive month. Reporting manufacturing establishments showed employment and pay roll decreases of 1.0 and 0.9 per cent, respectively. The most important decreases were in plants in the transportation equipment, paper goods, printing and publishing, and food manufacturing groups.

For Illinois as a whole, most of the decrease was concentrated in the food, paper goods, and printing and publishing groups, which generally show reductions in work forces during this period, Gordon said.

Merchandising Fields Gain.

Wholesale and retail trade and building construction were the only nonmanufacturing groups for which more employes and higher wage payments were reported.

Average weekly earnings again reached an all-time high, $47.68 for both sexes combined in all represented industries and $50.43 in manufacturing industries. Earnings of men, which averaged slightly below the December peak, were $55.46 and $56.18, and those of women $33.32 and $35.08, respectively, for all represented and manufacturing industries.

Pennsylvania Orders 50 Passenger Locomotives

Philadelphia, Pa., March 26 (AP).—The Pennsylvania railroad today announced it has placed orders for 50 powerful multicylinder steam locomotives, capable of hauling full length passenger trains at speeds up to 100 miles an hour. Twenty-five engines will be built by the Baldwin Locomotive works and 25 engines and 50 tenders by the railroad's Altoona, Pa., shops.

[PHILCO CORPORATION.]

Receipt of large war orders by Philco corporation in 1942 and later was accompanied by a drastic change in the market action of its stock. The shares of this Philadelphia enterprise, incorporated in 1892, had been offered to the public in 1940 at $15 a share. After listing on the New York Stock exchange in that year, the stock's general trend was downward for about two years. It reached a low of 7⅝ in 1942.

The issue attracted buyers, however, when the company turned to war production. The price trend was reversed, and a peak of 37 was reached in 1944. The appreciation of 385 per cent from the low is one of the outstanding price swings which have marked the war time speculation in radio shares.

In normal times, Philco is one of the largest manufacturers of radio receiving sets. Radio tubes and parts, phonographs, household refrigerators, air conditioners, and storage and dry batteries also are part of its regular lines. The company, whose commercial television broadcasting station was licensed in 1941, has made preparations to manufacture television receiving sets as soon as conditions warrant.

At its 1944 high of 37 [half a point above the 1945 high], the stock was quoted 23 times the average earnings of $1.61 a share for the four years ended with 1942, before war business affected profits in an important way. Net losses had been reported for 1937 and 1938. Outstanding are 1,372,143 shares of $3 par value. Twenty-three times earnings is a high multiple for any industry, particularly so for the competitive radio industry, sensitive to the influence of business cycles. Recent prices were 3 points or more under the high, but were more than 20 times this average profit. Dividend payments in 1944 were $1.20 a share.

Earnings of $2.60 a share in 1943 and $2.11 in the nine months ended last September [latest available], after provision for renegotiation, are capitalized more moderately, but these profits are derived from abnormal war business. Sales climbed from $68,505,979 in 1942 to $116,395,598 in 1943, and a further gain may be shown when the 1944 total is published. Sales and earnings after the war may exceed the levels shown from 1937 thru 1942, but in capitalizing such prospects the market is obviously on speculative ground.

Current assets as of Dec. 31, 1943, totaled $51,243,341 and current liabilities $36,970,507. There was no funded debt. Book value of the capital stock, excluding patents and television license, was in excess of $15 a share.

NLRB REVERSES BARGAINING BY FOREMEN RULE

Peace at Any Price, Dissenter Holds.

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—The national labor relations board today reversed itself on an issue of major importance by recognizing foremen's groups as collective bargaining units under the Wagner act.

Gerard D. Reilly.

Ruling in the case of the Packard Motor Car company, Detroit, and the Foremen's association, independent, the board upset its decision in the Maryland Drydock case, handed down in May, 1943.

Chairman Harry A. Millis and John M. Houston signed the decision, but Gerard D. Reilly vigorously dissented, asserting his colleagues' course "smacks of 'peace at any price' policy."

Detroit Strikes Upheld.

Millis and Houston pointed to the foremen's strikes which held up war work in Detroit. They said that since the Wagner labor relations act was passed, rank and file employes have found it unnecessary to strike for recognition and could now "obtain that right by resorting to the peaceful and orderly procedures of the board."

"We believe it reasonable to predict that the same results will flow from the recognition of those rights for supervisory employes," they added.

Reilly said that any benefits which might result from the grant of recognition to supervisory employes "were outweighed by the dangers inherent in the co-mingling of management and employe functions, and in the possible restrictive effect upon the freedom of rank and file employes."

Millis and Houston contended the foreman's role in industry had so changed since the 1900s that he was a mere "traffic cop" of industry today because he is required to adhere to procedures set by management and has no authority to make decisions or discharge, transfer or reclassify employes.

Paid $5,000 or More a Year.

The board had previously interpreted the Wagner act as not covering supervisory employes, because they were considered part of management.

Reilly said the salaries of employes in the Packard case were $5,000 to $6,000, that they "do not fall into the category of that 'one-third of the nation—ill-fed, ill-housed, and ill-clothed'," and that "it is unfortunately no novelty to have disgruntled unions strike and interfere with production because this board had refused to recognize units which they proposed as appropriate."

He suggested "a wiser remedy would be legislation conferring upon this board the same power to invoke judicial process against recalcitrant labor organization which it now possesses with regard to disobedient employers."

JURISDICTIONAL STRIKE? NO, IT'S 24 HOUR PROTEST

Richmond, Cal., March 26 (AP).—An estimated 900 AFL shipwrights remained off the job at Kaiser company shipyard No. 3 today in protest against allocation of some types of their work to AFL boilermakers because of the switchover to ship repair.

Stanley Lore, business agent of the shipwrights, insisted the walkout was not a strike, but a "24-hour-a-day protest meeting" against violations of agreements by the company. The management termed it a jurisdictional dispute, however, as did the boilermakers, whose spokesman said his union was demanding "our proper work."

Larger Shift Premiums Granted in Alcoa Plants

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—Increased shift differentials for 50,000 workers in 20 plants of the Aluminum Company of America were ordered today by the war labor board. Premiums of 4 to 6 cents an hour were directed for second and third shift work. Employes are represented by the CIO United Steel Workers. Previous differentials were 3 and 5 cents.

Small Firms' Credit Pools Pass ½ Billion

New York, March 26 (AP).—Bank credit groups have set up supplementary sources amounting to 500 million dollars for post-war small business, Robert M. Hanes said today.

Chairman of the post-war small business credit commission of the American Bankers association, Hanes reported to the country's banks the credit groups ultimately will provide a source of credit far in excess of 600 millions.

Organize More Groups.

Groups have been organized in 27 districts since they were suggested last July as part of a five point plan to meet post-war credit needs, and many more are being set up.

Thru the groups, banking has fulfilled its pledge that "if the individual banks cannot grant the credit, the bankers pledge to stay with the applicant and see that he gets the money from some other bank or group of banks," he said.

"American banking will see that small business lives and is given the opportunity to grow and prosper."

Set Up Special Departments.

Hanes said banks also have put that policy into action thru establishment of small business loan departments; application of the term loan principle to small business; revitalization of correspondent banking, and credit education programs.

BELL & HOWELL PROFIT MOUNTS, SEC IS INFORMED

War time earnings of Bell & Howell company are well above those of recent peace time years, J. H. McNabb, president, said yesterday when the company filed with the securities and exchange commission 30,000 shares of 4¼ per cent $100 par cumulative preferred and 150,000 shares of $10 par common stock. This first public offering of Bell & Howell securities is expected to be made thru a group headed by Harriman, Ripley & Co.

Peak war time profit was reached in 1943 when net income was $700,234. Profit was $540,261 in 1939, $319,500 in 1940, $387,804 in 1941, $626,580 in 1942, and $628,010 in 1944. Federal taxes were $931,147 in 1942, $1,502,515 in 1943, and an estimated $1,910,000 in 1944. Current assets on Dec. 31 were $11,936,483.

McNabb said that after the war Bell & Howell plans production of several new lines of motion picture cameras and projectors, both professional and amateur sound equipment, and still cameras and projectors, and contemplates production of several items developed in the field of electronics.

COURT ACCEPTS GEORGIA PLAINT ON RAIL RATES

Not Subject to ICC Control, Is Ruling.

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—Georgia today won the right to go directly into Supreme court with a suit based on long standing charges of southern states that they are discriminated against on railroad freight rates.

Gov. Ellis Arnall.

The court, in a 5 to 4 decision, agreed to consider the state's complaint that 20 railroads have conspired against Georgia. Chief Justice Stone objected that the decision opened the way to litigation that could "bring chaos in the field of interstate rate making." Justices Roberts, Frankfurter, and Jackson concurred in the dissent.

Would Break Rate System.

Speaking for the majority, Douglas said the relief asked by Georgia is not a matter subject to interstate commerce commission jurisdiction. In dissent Chief Justice Stone said, "This court cannot give any effective relief removing the threat of injury to the state resulting from a rate conspiracy without breaking down the system of rate regulation by the commission."

Attaches expect the court to appoint a master to take testimony and receive evidence. He would make a report and recommendation to the court. Such a procedure would mean no early decision.

Technically the court gave Georgia the right to file the complaint. Gov. Ellis Arnall contended the railroads had conspired to prevent lower rates for his state by setting up an illegal combination giving northern business an advantage.

Held Attack on Principle.

Railroad attorneys argued the lines were required to fix rates jointly and file them with the ICC. They said Georgia has a similar case pending with the ICC and that to receive the suit would destroy the principle of ICC regulation.

The court agreed to review conviction of three major tobacco companies on charges of violating the Sherman anti-trust act. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, Liggett & Myers Tobacco company, and American Tobacco company complained they were deprived of a fair trial by an impartial jury.

World Fund Assailed by Bank, Defended by Reserve Official

'No Trade Solution'

The solution of the problem of post-war credit in foreign trade "most emphatically" does not lie in an international monetary fund of the type provided in the Bretton Woods proposals, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York said yesterday in its monthly review of business.

It warned that too much reliance or credit as a means of increasing foreign markets for American products must be avoided. The volume of capital exports should be determined strictly from the long term investment point of view, with due weight given to their probable broad economic effects and the prospects of repayment, it explained.

Credit Temptation Strong.

"There will be a strong temptation to use credit as it was used after the last war as a means of stimulating merchandise exports without considering that in the end imports and services must pay for both the loans and our exports," the bank said. "If such practices should be adopted again they would probably end, as before, in a general international collapse of credit and trade, with heavy losses to American investors."

The bank said the international bank for reconstruction and development as proposed at Bretton Woods would be much more effective for providing credit needed to promote exchange availability and to finance rehabilitation than would the international monetary fund.

"The monetary fund could perform no useful function that the international bank could not perform as well or better; and it would expose the world, and the United States in particular, to a number of serious dangers," it warned.

Provides No Stabilization.

"If the proposal offered prospects of lasting currency stabilization its costs, even tho large, might be accepted as no more than a reasonable price to pay for such a desirable objective. But the plan would do little or nothing to promote true stabilization, and it might have exactly the opposite effect. Currency stability comes not from exchange-pegging agreements or lavish extensions of credit, but from sound economic, monetary, and fiscal conditions in individual countries."

The bank predicted that to a certain extent the maldistribution of gold and capital funds will tend to correct itself after the war. The big share of the world's gold held by the United States is partly offset by abnormally large foreign balances held in this country, it explained.

"It is reasonable to assume that the foreign balances will either be spent for American goods or repatriated until they are restored to normal levels," it said.

Fight Economic War

The proposed international monetary fund and bank were designed to prevent the nations from resuming after the war the financial practices of currency depreciation and exchange control of the 1930s, Walter R. Gardiner, chief of the international section of the board of governors of the federal reserve system, said last night.

"Our purpose at Bretton Woods was to avoid slipping back into this economic warfare which throttled international trade and cut our own foreign trade from 5 billion dollars in 1929 to 1½ billion dollars in 1932," he told a joint session of the Export Managers club of Chicago and the Business and Professional Women's club of Chicago in the dining room of the Chicago Bar association.

Stabilization Sought.

"We knew as sure as anything when we began work on these proposals that without a form of stabilization the world would slip back into these practices of the '30s," he said. "Germany started depreciation of currency and exchange control early in the last decade and other countries were forced, most of them reluctantly, to do the same. The gold system was beautiful while it worked, but it was breaking down in the '30s and lost much of its stabilizing influence. We don't want to go back to conditions of that time."

Denying criticisms that the proposals were hastily conceived and drafted, he said they had been in preparation almost three years and were discussed individually with financial leaders of the 44 countries which sent delegates to the conference. A preliminary meeting of several countries also was held at Atlantic City shortly before the Bretton Woods gathering in July.

Argues Controls Are Effective.

In reply to opponents who assert the fund would encourage loose lending, he contended that automatic and discretionary controls would prevent such a practice.

The discretionary controls, which he termed "most drastic," provide that the fund need not start business until the world has "settled down" to a state approaching normal, that the fund does not have to make loans to individual countries where "chaotic" conditions prevail, and that a nation which does not fulfill its obligations can be cut off "over night."

He said the automatic controls provide that fund loans could not be used to transfer capital out of a country and not more than 25 per cent of a country's quota could be borrowed in any one year. They also call for an initial loan service charge of ¾ per cent and progressively increasing interest charges after the first loan and after the first year of a loan.

HEAVY SELLING POUNDS STOCK PRICES LOWER

Many Issues Come Out in Big Blocks.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Liquidation gripped the stock market today and losses and volume were largest since the selloff of March 9. The direction was downward from the opening and, altho a few issues recovered ultimately, losses of 1 to 3 or more points were widespread at the close. Large blocks of both high and low priced issues lifted turnover to 1,390,000 shares, compared with 680,000 Friday.

As in last week's retreat, offerings were based principally on persistent industrial reconversion apprehension caused by the allied push in Germany and on reports from Washington, D. C., that a crackdown on speculation still was under consideration. Talk continued of boosting margins to 100 per cent and lifting war time capital gains taxes on real estate and securities.

The Associated Press 60 stock average was off 0.9 at 59, a return to the low mark of early February. Of 980 issues traded, 837 declined, 61 advanced, and 82 were unchanged.

RAILS LEAD BOND DIP.

New York, March 26 (AP).—Substantial selling of rails pushed many bonds fractions to about 2 points lower today. The Associated Press 20 rail average lost 0.6, widest loss since Jan. 20. Other groups were down 0.1 to 0.2. Sales were $8,370,000, compared with $5,831,000 Friday.

CHICAGO LIST SAGS.

Prices fell in a broad setback on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday. Of 146 issues traded, 116 declined and only 20 advanced. Most active stocks in 52,000 share turnover included Peabody Coal and Sinclair Oil, each off ¾; Chicago corporation common, down ⅝, and Asbestos Manufacturing and Commonwealth Edison, each off ¼.

Publishers Told to Cut Newsprint Orders 6 Pct.

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—WPB today ordered newspaper publishers to reduce by 6 per cent April orders on paper mills in Canada, the United States, and Newfoundland. The printing and publishing division said the action is designed to balance newsprint demands with supplies. It does not involve a reduction in consumption quotas.

Douglas Sets Plane Making Output Mark

Douglas Aircraft company set a world record in aircraft production for any manufacturer in its fiscal year ended Nov. 30 with output totaling nearly 180 million pounds of airplanes and parts, Donald W. Douglas, president, said yesterday in his annual report to stockholders.

Donald W. Douglas.

A breakdown of production, almost 100 per cent for the government, showed dive bombers, 3.5 per cent; attack bombers, 23.2 per cent; heavy bombers, 29.1 per cent, and transports, 44.2 per cent.

Sales soared to a record $1,061,407,485 from the previous peak of $987,687,196 in 1943 and were 38 times the 1939 volume.

Nets Only 0.73 Cent Per Dollar.

Net income represented only 0.73 per cent of sales, said Douglas, amounting to $7,685,227, or $12.81 a share, compared with $5,952,257, or $9.92 a share, in the preceding fiscal year. Profit before contingency provisions was smaller, however, such provisions being cut to $2,715,000 from $6,950,000.

Renegotiation of 1943 earnings required no refunds and none was expected for 1944, said Douglas.

The complex problems incurred in operations were magnified by an "increasing maze of governmental regulations, restrictions, and requirements," and by cutbacks and contract cancellations, he said.

Douglas said national preparation for efficient contract settlement made progress in 1944, but financial settlement under contracts normally completed remained "disappointingly slow." He listed the disposal of government owned facilities as another problem "overhanging post-war prospects for the plane industry."

Crane Reports Figures.

The company entered 1945 with a back log of approximately 2 billion dollars, including 129 million dollars of commercial orders—which he termed "a yardstick of the difficulties that lie ahead."

Crane company reported 1944 net earnings were $6,808,269, or $2.49 a share, before provisions for renegotiation refunds, compared with an adjusted 1943 profit of $4,876,753, or $1.66 a share. Profit in 1943 before renegotiation was stated at $6,909,381, or $2.53 a share. Sales declined to $152,479,052 from $166,611,599 in 1943.

Price trims and reduced volume of regular valves and fittings, partly offset by increased special and war item demand caused the sales decline, said J. H. Collier, president.

F. D. R. SETS OFF HOTTEST TARIFF FIGHT SINCE '30

New Trade Powers Held Blow to U.S.

Washington, D. C., March 26 (AP).—President Roosevelt asked congress today for new power to slash tariffs to help "build an economically healthy world" and immediately met strong opposition from Republicans who said the move would be an economic blow to the United States. Indications were that Capitol hill was headed toward the hottest tariff fight since the Smoot-Hawley bill was written in 1930.

In a surprise special message to congress, the President indorsed a bill by Chairman Doughton [D., N. C.] of the ways and means committee. The bill would extend the reciprocal trade agreements act for three years and yield added authority to the administration to cut levies on imports 50 per cent from levels last Jan. 1 in return for concessions from other countries.

Cuts Might Run to 75 Per Cent.

The original trade agreements act of 1934 permitted cuts to 50 per cent of Smoot-Hawley rates, so that on items which already have had the full permitted cut the over-all reduction might total 75 per cent.

The Roosevelt message and stormy Republican comment laid out the framework of argument thus:

THE PRESIDENT: Further tariff cutting authority is necessary to trade other countries out of high level duties. It means more exports as well as imports. Other nations cannot pay what they owe unless the United States buys from them. More imports mean more processing and distributing jobs at home.

G. O. P. CONGRESSMEN: Lower tariffs mean closed American industries and the post-war goal of 60 million jobs won't be attained. The reciprocal trade program never has been actually reciprocal, and spells unemployment.

Not Enough to Offer—F. D. R.

Mr. Roosevelt asserted that under the act as it now stands, the United States does not have enough to offer foreign countries "to serve as a

UNIFIED HEALTH RULE URGED IN CHICAGO AREA

Leaders Tell of Needed Reforms.

Unified control to coördinate the efforts of five health forces now waging separate fights against disease on Chicago's home front was advocated yesterday at the conclusion of a forum on "An Integrated Medical Plan for the Chicago Area."

The subject was discussed at a luncheon meeting of the City club in the La Salle hotel by Dr. William F. Petersen, chairman of the board of governors of the Institute of Medicine of Chicago, Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of the Council of Social Agencies, and Dr. E. A. Piszczek, health officer of the Cook county unit.

In recommending unified control for the divergent health services now being rendered by county, state, city, federal, and voluntary groups, Reynolds suggested that such authority might be centered in the county.

Tubercular Death Rate High.

He added, that instead of planning for additional public health services, Chicago might possibly make better use of the health facilities it now possesses. The city, he related, in a three year period from 1939 to 1941, inclusive, had a tuberculosis death rate of 45.4 for each 100,000 of its white population, whereas for Negroes the rate was 250 per 100,000, or six times as high. There is immediate need, he said, of 2,000 more beds to care for Negro tuberculosis patients here.

Dr. Petersen predicted that after the war we will be "much poorer," both individually and as a community, and that the only way Chicago then can have more health and medical services, despite its poverty, will be thru greater efficiency, careful planning, and making an effort to avoid "freezing its plant and thinking."

Authority Conflict Cited.

He likened the present maze of "overlapping and uncoördinated" taxing bodies supervising Chicagoland's health to a "Rube Goldberg" administrative machine, and said that even the federal government could "not make sense" of the conflict in authority between the health department and the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium.

These agencies, he charged, duplicate each other's nursing care of tuberculosis patients.

VARNISH BLAST STARTS FIRE; 2 MEN INJURED

Two persons were injured yesterday in an explosion and fire at the plant of the Sterling Material Supply company, 3639 S. Ashland av., which resulted when a truckload of varnish removed upset on an elevator, and was ignited by a spark from the elevator motor.

Earl Sanders, 43, of 4433 Greenwood av., an employe, was taken to St. Anthony hospital for treatment after he fell on a stairway in leaving the building. Fireman Stephen Mangan, 38, of 7404 Aberdeen st., a member of engine company 39, was cut by flying glass.

Chief Rudolph Goetz of the 1st battalion estimated damage at $8,000. The building and the company are owned by Harry Rosenfield, 6136 N. Mozart st.

MISSING SKULL OF SKELETON HINTS MURDER

Kane county authorities yesterday announced the recovery of all bones except the skull and jaw belonging to a skeleton found last week in a basin beside an underpass of U. S. highway 20 about 10 miles northwest of Elgin. The missing forearm bones and those of the feet were recovered yesterday in a two foot thick bed of muck at the bottom of the basin, installed to prevent flooding of the highway.

Absence of the skull caused Coroner Victor L. Peterson to conjecture the victim had been murdered by decapitation and his head disposed of elsewhere to thwart possible identification. A belt buckle with the initial "F" and a briar pipe with three similar initals carved on its bowl also were recovered.

Dr. Eric Liebert, pathologist at Elgin State hospital, who examined the bones, said the victim was a man about 30 and of medium height.
